Bloc Against the U. S. A.
Men Die Strangely.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

KARL H. VON WIEGAND cables from Berlin to Universal Service about the "Anti-American Bloc," just perfected in Europe. Germany has joined and it includes France, Great Britain, Italy, Belgium, Poland, Jugo-Slavia and Rumania.

Mr. Von Wiegand says "British Foreign Secretary Simon and Premier Herriot of France have planned to isolate the United States if Washington refuses to cancel war debts."

Boycotting is easy, sometimes unprofitable. Eight merchants might unite to boycott their best customer and not be happy when the customer stops buying.

Canada, according to the New York Times, agrees to drop one-quarter of its coal importations from the United States if Britain in return will buy Canadian lumber.

At this moment the United States buys from Canada more than is bought by the whole British Empire. Ten lines in a new tariff bill and the United States would buy from Canada NOTHING. Boycotts are dangerous. This one may be good for our country.

Success has been too easy in the United States. Difficulties might do us good.

The "United Farmers of Canada," through their Saskatchewan president, demand "an end of the capitalistic system." The farmers say:

"Competitive production, for profit, under private control, is in its dying hours."

It might be well to watch Russia for a while before deciding. The frogs got rid of the dull log, their ruler, and acquired for king a long-legged bird that devoured them. They wished they had not complained.

Capitalism is not perfect, but it has been a fairly good-natured old ruler. It certainly has increased wages, bath tubs, automobiles, radios and vacuum cleaners. It might be wise to try it a while longer.

When men decide to die, usually a decision more or less cowardly, they do it in strange ways. One jumps into a volcano, taking a girl with him. Another goes over Niagara, some jump in front of locomotives, some bang, shoot or drown themselves.

Roscoe Griffith went about it deliberately. To ambulance doctors, called by his wife, to find him eating a hearty dinner, he said, "My wife is mistaken, gentlemen, I have taken no poison." And he smiled.

They took him to the hospital, he walked from the ambulance to the door, and fell dead.

So many pleasant things can happen, sc. many interesting things are sure to happen, "gigantic troubles" melt so quickly that it is silly not to wait as long as possible and see.

George Bernard Shaw, 76 years old yesterday, does not like to have it mentioned. When he is 96 he will be proud of his age, and tell everybody. He says: "I am overworked and have that all my life." That is why he retains good health at 76. Mental work keeps the body "fit." Men, like trees, die at the top.

The Russian, Gorguloff, who murdered President Doumer of France, says that he wants to be executed, and the French will probably oblige him. He wants to "leave this earth," and predicts disaster for all of us. He liked the old earth so little that he wanted to be sent in a rocket to the moon, before he killed the French President.

Those that expected to find in Gorguloff's crime a new proof of Bolshevik wickedness are disappointed. It turns out that he murdered Doumer to rebuke Bolshevism in the name of his enslaved Russian people."

Rudy Vallee is studying law, against a time when "I shall sing no more." He will find that very profitable crooning is done in his new profession.

EXPLOSION SHAKES SO. SHORE; HOUSES DAMAGED, 12 INJURED

COUNCILLORS WALK OUT ON YOUNGMAN

Youngman, presiding during the absence from the State of Governor Ely, accused the council members of trying to put him "in the middle" by bringing up two items to which he was opposed and against which, as presiding officer, he had no vote.

"I refuse to be put in the bag during the Governor's absence," exclaimed Youngman when he quit the council chamber after most of the councillors already had taken "French leave."

The council sat for an hour and 15 minutes, and those left at the end of that time adjourned until later this afternoon, but several of those who had previously quit the chamber said they would not be back.

NEW TUNNEL BILL

An attempt to approve the $338,000 payment to the Boston Port Development Co., for East Boston land taken for the new tunnel highway started the fireworks, according to the lieutenant-governor.

He said he immediately withdrew the item from consideration and will send the papers back to the public works department.

Youngman's right to withdraw the item was questioned by several council members, but he won the argument.

WITHDRAWS ITEM

Councillor James H. Brennan then moved that a pardon be granted to a man now serving a prison sentence for arson. Councillor Esther M. Andrews seconded the motion.

"The item is withdrawn," said Youngman.

He said adjournment was taken because he refused to sign a banket warrant for several payments and wanted to take each item up individually and scrutinize it carefully, especially if it were a land settlement.

"It was an attempt to put me in an embarrassing position by placing me in a situation where I appeared to favor things which I actually oppose," he said. "I have full responsibility in the Governor's absence."

WON'T TELL REASONS

One of the council members raised the question whether Gov. Ely was actually out of the state and Secretary De Wolfe was sent for. He assured the councillors that the governor was in Albany, N. Y.

None of the councillors who quit the chamber while the session was in progress would discuss their reasons for doing so.

27,000 N. Y. Workers Leave Jobs for Day

New York, July 27 (AP)—Machines in 1450 garment shops throughout the city were silenced this morning as 27,000 workers, responding to orders issued by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, dropped their tools and left for meeting halls to register in an organizing drive. Officials of the union insisted no strike had been called.

U. S. READY TO AID EUROPE, SAYS EDGE

Ambassador Assures France of Assistance if Armaments Are Reduced

Paris, July 27 (INS)—Ambassador Walter E. Edge, in a long talk with Premier Herriot this afternoon, assured the head of the French government that the United States would adopt a more flexible attitude toward European problems if disarmed Europe agreed to reduce her armamenia.

Officially it was declared the subject of debts was not discussed. Nevertheless, by what Senator Borah's radio speech last Saturday night on the debt subject, it is believed Edge conveyed the hint discussion to Herriot that a real step toward disarmament must be the consideration by Washington of debt revision.

Despite warning advices from French correspondents in America reporting strong hostility to further cuts in European war debts, the hope still persists in official circles here that an early move in this direction will be made and Edge's talk was considered encouraging.

The American ambassador's visit was of particular significance since he returned only yesterday from the United States where he conferred with President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson.

The specific object for the call was to ask most-favored nation treatment for American goods. In response to countless complaints from American firms that they were being grossly discriminated against Edge had made vigorous representations to Andre Tardieu, Herriot's predecessor in the premiership.

THREE BOYS DID THIS TO HYMAN!

Three Norwood youths who took Hyman Miller, a Norwood second-hand dealer, "for a ride" were today found guilty of kidnaping and assulting him and were sentenced in Dedham court to four months each.

The youths, John F. Conley, Silver st.; John J. McCarthy, Fulton st., and John P. Clancey, Hill st., all appealed and were held in $1500 each.

Miller testified he met the trio at midnight in a restaurant a month ago. One displayed a police badge and Miller followed them to a patrol box beside which stood an automobile.

"They forced me into the car," he testified. "And they took me for a ride and gave me a severe beating. Later they drove me to a house and told me it was the Mansfield jail. I was locked in a room and then later taken out and placed once again in the machine. As we passed the clay pits they told me three dead men were already in the lake. Then they took me out of the car, gave me the giant's swing and threw me in."

Miller said he later learned the men went to his home, unhitched horses from his barn and took saddle rides.

CRANK JEERS AT HOME OF DEATH

A fanatic residing in the neighborhood was sought by police and postal inspectors today as the author of the third threatening letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hobson of Hester st., Lynn.

The third threat in six months took the form of a warning delivered as the bereaved parents mourned at the casket of their son, George, eight, who was drowned Monday in a Lynn marsh pool at a point where the anonymous letter writer had indicated one of the family would die. It was a bereavement card on one side of which was written:

"Deepest sympathy in the death of your boy."

On the other side appeared this warning:

"Watch out. Dorothea is next."

The threat against the daughter in the family revived some suspicion that the drowning of the boy might have been other than accidental, but Chief Broad said there was no basis for such belief.

Houses were damaged over a radius of several miles, and occupants of buildings in Quincy, Milton, Weymouth, Hingham, Braintree and Cohasset felt the force of the blast.

One woman living near the scene was knocked unconscious and many others were slightly stunned. Several women fainted.

DRIVE TO EVICT BONUS ARMY BOYS IS DELAYED

POLICE AWAIT NEW ORDERS IN MOVE

Veterans Remain in Quarters as Plans to Oust Them Strike Another Snag

Washington, July 27—Three thousand veterans placidly occupied shacks and makeshift quarters on Pennsylvania ave. today, wondering when federal authorities would try to evict them.

Pelham D. Glassford, police superintendent, arrived with 50 patrolmen and conferred with Walter Waters, bonus army commander.

"The Treasury has its workers here ready to start," Glassford told Waters. "Do you want to evacuate?"

"I can't ask the men to vacate until there are other quarters for them," Waters replied.

"Well, if haven't any orders to vacate them," Glassford said.

Maj. Edward Keyes, on hand as official observer for the Treasury Department said the orders went from the Treasury to the district commissioners yesterday afternoon.

STEAM SHOVELS READY

But they had not reached Glassford, so after trying unsuccessfully to reach the commissioners by telephone, he returned to his office to await the delayed orders.

His insurance company instructed him to hold off work until the property was cleared or give up all insurance privileges.

PEACE EFFORTS FAIL

Leaders in the army under Waters regarded today's "zero hour" as of great importance, and all of them were obviously not entirely in sympathy with their master's command to "passive resistance."

They explained that should the police be able to clear the lower Pennsylvania ave. property with virtually no resistance, the next move would be on the bonus camp at Anacostia, where the main body of the army is quartered.

SCOT'S CLAIM IN WENDEL FIGHT IS ATTACKED

Counsel Produces Checks to Dispute the Date on Which Morris Was Given "Will"

New York, July 27 (INS)—Attorneys for the Wendel estate today attacked the story told on the stand yesterday by Thomas Patrick Morris, 32-year-old Scotsman, who claims to be the son of wealthy John J. Wendel, who died leaving a fortune of millions of dollars in real estate.

The lawyers brought out that Wendel was in New York in June, 1901, at the time he was supposed to have been in Dundee, Scotland, giving a book in which he had written his last will and testament.

Morris, a thin man suffering from heart trouble, testifying before Surrogate Foley in the fight for the estate, claimed that through this "will" Wendel left all of his fortune to him. At the time he received the "will" Morris was 21 years old.

PRODUCES CHECK

John M. Harlan, lawyer for the Wendel estate, conducted the cross-examination of Morris. First he had the witness definitely fix the date in which he received the book.

"Would it surprise you to know at the time you say you received this book Mr. Wendel drew a check in New York which he cashed next day?" asked Atty. Harlan.

"It would," replied the witness.

The lawyer said the check had been drawn June 4, 1901. He proceeded to show that other checks had been drawn by Wendel in New York that month. Also that he wrote letters from the Wendel estate on Long Island to his employes in New York city.

STICKS TO DATE

Atty. Harlan told Morris he wanted to be fair with him and asked him, in view of the evidence presented, did he still say Wendel was in Scotland at that time.

"I still stick to June, 1901," replied Morris.

Morris fixed the time in his own mind because his first child had been born the month before.

Harlan also brought out that Morris never told even his wife that Wendel was his father; that his (Morris') children were never so informed.

Morris admitted that no one alive today had seen the book containing the "will" before it had been produced in court.

ROOSEVELT BIDS FOR BAY STATE SUPPORT

The Democratic presidential nomitee is scheduled to confer with Gov. Ely of Massachusetts in an effort to heal the wounds of the national convention and solidify the Al Smith Democrats in the Bay State behind the Roosevelt-Garner banner.

Roosevelt, according to his advisors, is prepared to "go more than half way" in extending a friendly hand to the Smith supporters in Massachusetts.

He is hopeful his chat with Gov. Ely will be turned into a love feast and that it will be the means of inducing former Governor Smith to stump the industrial East this fall for the national ticket.

WANTS TO WIN BAY STATE

If all goes well at today's meeting, friends of Gov. Roosevelt expect Governor Ely to issue a statement pledging the loyal support of Massachusetts Democrats in the forthcoming campaign.

Massachusetts is the only state that supported Smith at the Chicago convention which has not yet rallied to the Roosevelt-Garner banner. Roosevelt is extremely anxious to get this situation straightened out before the campaign gets under way.

If Gov. Ely would as much as suggest it to Gov. Roosevelt the latter, according to reports at the Capitol, would make his first campaign speech in the Bay State.

Roosevelt is said to believe that if he appeared on the same platform with Ely it would do more than anything else, except a personal plea from Smith, to insure the solid support of the Massachusetts Democrats at the polls.

MAY OPEN HERE

One reason why Roosevelt has not made any definite plans for his first campaign speech is because he wants to be free to go to Massachusetts should Governor Ely make the suggestion, his friends declared.

Cheering news about the west has been received by Roosevelt by Sen. Key Pitman of Nevada.

"With the possible exception of California, Governor Roosevelt will carry all of the western states," Pitman declared. "Roosevelt will be sent into the White House by the greatest landslide in history."

Edward F. Goltra, former national committeeman of Missouri, told Roosevelt there was nothing to worr' about so far as his home State was concerned.

"The people of Missouri are waiting impatiently for the time to come when they can cast their ballots for Governor Roosevelt," Goltra said.

Barbara Hutton Linked in Romance With Phil Plant

Paris, July 27—The romance of Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin L. Hutton, and Philip M. Plant, New York playboy, adopted son and heir of Morton F. Plant, Florida railroad king, is blooming again and is headed, friends say, toward matrimony.

Miss Hutton, ending a world cruise, had been living here for some time and it was reported her parents did not approve of Plant's attempt to secure her hand in marriage. Friends of the young couple said that Miss Hutton has overcome the parental objections.

New York, July 27—Viola Doboe, ex-prima ballerina of the Budapest Opera, has asked the United States to deport her because she is hungry and penniless.

Although her permit to stay in this country expired March 12, it would be possible for the opera singer to obtain a continuation of stay. Never theless, Miss Doboe wants deportation.

Patman Predicts Congress Will Act to Aid Vets

Gadsden, Ala., July 27—Congressman Wright Patman of Texas, predicts that Congress will pass bonus legislation which when placed before the American World War veterans on a level with those of European nations.

Patman made this declaration at the Alabama convention of the American Legion here amidst an ovation sprinkled with shouts of "we want beer."

The persistent failure of Congress to pass legislation which would relieve the veterans' predicament, Patman said, must be remedied eventually and probably will be remedied in the near future.

FOUR SOUGHT IN ATTACK CASE

Worcester, July 27—Four young men are being sought on the complaint of Mabel Lanois, 34, of Chatham st., who was thrown out of an automobile near her home today after she had been attacked in the woods near Grafton.

Hysterical and badly beaten the woman told police she had gone to an amusement park in Shrewsbury with a married woman companion who accompanied her when the fourth youths offered to drive them home.

Instead, she told the police, the car was driven to a wooded section. She was dragged from the car and attacked by each of the four.

Driving back to Worcester, Miss Lanois said, the quartet picked up and older man and drove back to the woods where he joined the others in a second attack.

The married woman, whose name the police withheld, was driven to her home and allowed to leave the car. When Miss Lanois struggled to get out she was beaten into unconsciousness, she said.

HERTER HEADS G. O. P. BUREAU

The publicity division of the Republican forces in Massachusetts was organized today, marking the opening of the active campaign for state and national tickets.

Amos L. Taylor, chairman of the state committee, announced that Rep. Christian A. Herter of Boston, intimate of President Hoover, has been made publicity director, to be assisted by Russell Gerould, their output to be handled by the Ingalls Advertising Agency.

Chairman Taylor said:

"The issue is not Hoover against some individual's ideal of what a President should be, but Hoover and Curtis against Roosevelt and Garner—the Republican party against the Democratic.

"It is our purpose to show what Hoover and his party have done to stem the tide of the world's greatest economic depression. It is our purpose to show the colossal incompetence of Democratic leadership during the brief control of the House by the Democrats."

2 HURT AS AUTO SNAPS POLE

Two Quincy men were injured today and traffic on the Dorchester-Boston highway was blocked when their machine skidded in Bridge st., Neponset, Weymouth, snapped off an electric pole.

The pole fell across the highway, carrying wires with it.

The injured men, Albert Dino, 23, of 196 East Howard st., Quincy Point, driver and owner of the auto, and John MacMayler, 45, same address, were treated at Quincy Hospital for serious cuts and bruises.

Prehistoric Beast Shown as Contemporary With Man

Cave City, Ky., July 27 (AP)—Preliminary examination of a "cave of bones," discovered near here last week by four boys, discloses evidence of three cultures of antiquity and that the mammoth, or pleistocene elephant, was contemporary with man.

Prof. William S. Webb, head of the department of archeology of the University of Kentucky, announcing that bones were found imbedded in crust below more than 100 feet of limestone, said formation of a deposit like that took tens of thousands of years.

Professor Webb will lead a party to explore the cave.

Skulls of humans were found in the same strata with animal bones five feet long and eight inches in diameter. Professor Webb said he expected to find bones of the sabre-toothed tiger, the Arctic fox and the Polar bear.

GREENHOUSE WRECKED

Several residents of Hough's Neck reported their houses shook. The back door was nearly blown off a house in Weymouth Highlands, four miles from the oil farm. Dishes were broken in North Weymouth.

In the house in Quincy, occupied by Miss Ruth Keller, who was flung to the floor of her front porch, bruised and knocked unconscious, a large hole was torn in the ceiling of the front room. Dr. Robert Galvin was called by neighbors to treat Miss Keller.

An automobile passing through Quincy ave. near the plant was flung to the sidewalk but was undamaged. A greenhouse nearby was thoroughly wrecked, every pane of glass being shattered.

WEEI TOWERS SHAKE

Men working in boats at wharves and mooring points nearby reported the explosion caused a small "tidal wave."

An explosion at the same plant in June, 1929, took three lives and caused injury to a number of employes.

MANIAC LINKED IN RUM DEATHS

San Francisco, July 27 (AP)—A murder plot spawned in the brain of a maniac, was suggested today by police investigating the poison liquor deaths yesterday of three men, two of whom were San Francisco traffic officers.

The victims, Louis Jacobson, manager of an office building, and Richard B. Smith and Joseph C. Lorens, both traffic policemen, died shortly after gathering in Jacobson's office.

An analysis of the contents of a half-empty bottle in the office revealed it contained enough poison to kill more than 100 men.

The patrolmen had carried a bottle of lemon punch which police believe was mixed with the contents of a bottle taken from Jacobson's filing cabinet. The latter bottle contained alcohol and water, plus a large quantity of the poison.

SHOWERS FAIL TO END HEAT

Those showers which dampened things up a bit today, but failed to relieve the heat appreciably will cease tonight, but cooler weather is predicted for tomorrow.

The rain gave some relief to drouth-worried farmers, but was far too light to repair the damage done to crops, especially in southern New England.

At 10 a. m. the thermometer registered 73 degrees, but the forecaster declared it doubtful that yesterday's maximum of 89 would be reached today.

The forecast reads: Showers this afternoon and probably early tonight, followed by fair weather late tonight and Thursday; somewhat cooler tonight; moderate westerly winds.

New York, July 27.

College girls—

Believe it is entirely proper to smoke;

Have drinking in moderation, is all right;

Believe necking and occasional petting parties are not harmful;

Believe that occasional "heavy love affairs" are necessary;

Believe that every girl should know "the facts of life."

Dr. Eugenia Andruss Leonard, research worker at Teachers' College, Columbia University, says so after perusing replies from 2,5 freshman girls at Syracuse University, interviewed by her in a study of "Problems of Freshman Girls."

ESSENTIAL TO SAFETY

"It is absolutely essential to safety to know about petting," one girl wrote to Dr. Leonard. "A girl has to know how to go about with boys, and to control them and herself, unless she wants to be a bookworm or a social grub."

"A girl entering college," another wrote, "is going on her own, probably for the first time in her life. She should be equipped with sex knowledge, and it is only fair that her mother should so equip the girl before sending her away from home. The girl needs the knowledge."

Girls in college, according to a number of letters, discuss sex in dormitories and sorority houses, and the older girls see to it that their less "wise" sisters "get to know what it's all about."

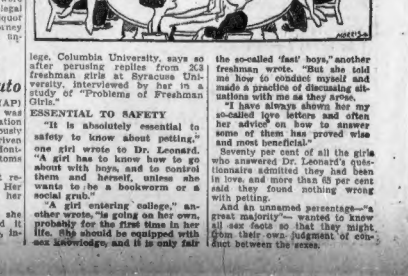
MOTHER AIDED HER

"My mother never raised objections to my going around with the so-called 'fast' boys," another freshman wrote. "But she told me how to conduct myself and made a practice of discussing situations with me as they arose.

"I have always shown her my so-called love letters and often her advice on how to answer some of them has proved wise and most beneficial."

Seventy per cent of all the girls who answered Dr. Leonard's questionnaire admitted they had been in love, and more than 65 per cent said they found nothing wrong with petting.

And an unnamed percentage—"a great majority"—wanted to know all sex facts so that they might form their own judgment of conduct between the sexes.



VANISHED CITY OFFICIAL BACK

Chicopee, July 27 (AP)—Joseph J. Chmura, who, while a member of the Board of Aldermen, dropped out of sight in October, 1929, returned to this city today, saying that he had hitch-hiked from New Mexico and that during his absence he had roamed over a dozen states.

Chmura walked into police headquarters to learn if any complaints had been lodged against him as the result of his disappearance, but was told by the police there were none. He was employed a san insurance agent here and left a wife and three children. The wife is now in an insane hospital.

Chmura told of his wanderings, but was reticent as to his reason for going away.

POISON HINT IN MONKS CASE

San Diego, Cal., July 27 (AP)—"Surprising developments" were forecast today by Deputy Dist. Atty. Holt to take place at the preliminary hearing tomorrow of Allan Bradford Monks, Boston heir, his wife, and her uncle, Wiley Lee Watson, all three of whom are charged with issuing a fictitious check.

Monks, suffering from a mysterious ailment, was arrested last week in Long Beach. He was unable to talk.

Holt revealed he had sent strands of Monks' hair to the county chemist for analysis to determine whether he had been submitted to a long course of poisoning.

At the time of his arrest, Monks was being kept in seclusion by George Otuska, Japanese guard employed by Mrs. Monks. Otuska is being held as a material witness.

Monks, members of a prominent Boston family, was reported to have an income of $1000 monthly which was deposited in a Boston bank. Payment of the allowance was stopped by his family when checks signed by Mrs. Monks were drawn against the account. This fact also led to the arrest of the trio.

Dying, Asks Boy Go Too; Train Kills Lad

Pittsburgh, July 27 (AP)—Mrs. Gillatis, dying, begged in delirium to take her five-year-old son, Johnnie, with her in death. Doctors sent the lad out to play. He wandered over to the railroad tracks.

His mother, still alive, continues to beg that "Johnnie go with me." But Johnny cannot, as he is gone on ahead.

ROGERS WINS IN OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City, July 27 (AP)—A flood of votes today had inundated a comparatively unknown country school master—Will Rogers—to make the Democratic race for Oklahoma congressman-at-large.

Rogers surged more than 100,000 votes ahead of Mrs. Mabel Bassett, popular state commissioner of charities, in yesterday's run-off primary.

Elmer Thomas, U. S. senator, won Democratic renomination. He defeated Gomer Smith, Oklahoma City lawyer.

Wm. Franklin, Ardmore oil man and generalissimo of the oil tax iff movement, had a comfortable lead over James A. Harris for the Republican nomination to oppose Thomas.

J. C. (Jack) Walton, deposed Governor, leads A. S. J. Shaw, former State auditor, for the Democratic nomination for a seat on the Important State corporation commission.

MALT COMPANY WINS DRY TEST

Springfield, Ill., July 27 (AP)—Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom ruled today that mere possession of articles which might be used for manufacture of intoxicating liquor did not constitute violation of the state prohibition law.

The opinion was requested by State's Attorney R. C. Rice of Galesburg, Ill., in the case of the American Malt Products Company, which displayed for sale, Rice said, bottles, jugs, kegs, malt extract, apricot, peach and blackberry flavoring, and other articles.

Proof that such articles were purchased and used for illegal manufacture of intoxicating liquor would be necessary, the attorney general stated, for conviction under the Illinois law.

U. S. Officers Hurt by Woman's Auto

St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 27 (AP)—Customs Officer Lee Wood was seriously injured and Immigration Officer Harry Page less seriously hurt last night as an auto driven by Mrs. Charles A. Bailey of Montpelier crashed into the customs office at Derby Line.

Mrs. Bailey crossed without reporting at the customs office. Her husband was asked to bring her back.

When Mrs. Bailey returned she lost control of her car and it knocked down a canopy prop, injuring the officers.

69 TRAPPED AT STUDIES WHEN SQUALL HIT

Vessel Erased in Boiling Sea; 36 Survivors Cling to Oars and Wreckage of Niobe

(Editor's note: The following graphic description of the sinking of the German training schooner Niobe with a loss of 69 lives was given to International News Service today by the master of the chief rescue ship.)

Kiel, Germany, July 27 (INS)—The German training schooner Niobe, with 69 cadets and members of her crew believed trapped in her lower quarters, lies today in 60 feet of water off Fehmarn Island in the Baltic sea.

Efforts will be made to salvage the vessel, but hope has been abandoned for the missing men. Many of the boys who were drowned were studying their lessons in navigation at their desks in the student quarters at the moment the sturdy craft overturned and went to the bottom.

It was at 2:30 p. m. yesterday that our lookout made the Niobe 1800 meters off the port bow. She was scudding with her under sails and top-gallant sails fixed in the vicinity of dangerous looking clouds. She greeted us by stringing up signal flags asking our name, our home port and our destination.

SQUALL HITS SHIP

A few moments later the Niobe was overtaken by a sudden squall. The black clouds that had been hovering over the

ROMANCE TO BE KEPT IN BLOOM, SAYS YVONNE

"Maurice Loves Only Me," the Bride Avers; Other Woman Report Branded Nonsense

Cannes, France, July 27 (INS)—Once they are divorced, Maurice Chevalier and Yvonne Vallee will embark on a romance they believe will bloom and blossom uninterrupted without marriage bonds, the pretty dancer revealed today.

Characterizing reports of 'another woman" in the smiling screen star's life as "perfect nonsense," Mlle. Vallee expounded a new philosophy of love, insisting she and Chevalier will have a perfect right to live together again when the courts have dissolved their matrimonial ties.

Their love she told the newspaper, Petit Nicois, could not have lasted under the bond of marriage.

"He loves only one person—and that person is me," the dancing partner of Chevalier's music hall days declared.

"There has been no wrong committed on either side. But we have a particular—perhaps a peculiar—idea of what life means.

"To me it means that our love could not last under the marriage ties, and yet divorce does not mean separation.

"We shall see each other. And why shouldn't we live together?

"We really don't want to talk about it. Maurice is my ideal and I have no thought but for his happiness. This chatter about another women is perfect nonsense."

Chevalier has taken the first first steps toward obtaining a divorce in Paris. Mlle. Vallee has announced she will not contest.

RUSHES TO AID OF VETS

The Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of St. Patrick's Church in Pittsburgh, Pa., who last January led the "hunger march" of the unemployed on Washington, pictured on the S. S. Majestic on his return from abroad, where he sought advice as to procedure during the "unemployed" political convention he will conduct in St. Louis in August. Father Cox said he is going to Washington to aid the jobless World War vets congregated there. He revealed also that he is "receptive" to the presidential candidacy of the "Jobless party" ticket.

DEATH TOLL 69 ON NAVY SHIP

Kiel, Germany, July 27 (AP)—A group of buoys bobbing on Kiel Bay today was all that remained to mark the sinking of the Niobe, German navy training ship that carried 69 cadets and officers to death yesterday. The old windjammer vessel, went down in a squall and the 69 were trapped in the schoolroom between decks when the ship sank in a swinkling in 11 fathams of water.

Only six of those below decks were able to save themselves. Thirty-seven were saved, including the captain, his lieutenant, 17 of the crew and 18 cadets.

The Niobe was a war prize and was reconditioned for training ship in the first moves to recreate a German navy under the limits imposed by the post-war treaties. For two years it was commanded by Count Felix von Luckner, "the Sea Devil."

The catastrophe is the third of its kind to overtake the navy. On November 14, 1861, the school ship Amazone sank off Holland and 145 were lost.

Refuses to Give Up Dog That Guards His Invalid Wife

Plead though they would, Judge Francis Good and court officials could not get Joseph Riggo of Freeport st., West End, to give up his dog today in municipal court—even temporarily for observation.

There are only two things Riggo has to live for, his invalid wife and the dog that protects her and keeps her company, he declared during a hearing at which he was found guilty of keeping a barking and biting animal.

Riggo's dog is alleged to have bitten Anthony Margio, nine, of Norman st., West End; John Bova, 14, of Margin st., West End, and Anthony DePasquale, 20, of Meridian st., East Boston.

According to Riggo, however, it is the boys who bother the dog, not the dog that is the aggressor.

Judge Good placed Riggo on probation and requested the probation officer and representatives of the Legal Aid Society, which defended Riggo, to see if they could not persuade him to surrender the dog temporarily for observation as to whether it is an ill-natured animal.

400 Jobless Beaten Off in Jail Attack

Lorain, O., July 27 (AP)—Milling about the city jail, nearly 400 unemployed citizens attempted last night to release their leader from arrest and were driven off only when the police resorted to clubbing. Several were injured.

Mexico Seizes U. S. Citizen's Property

Vera Cruz, July 27 (INS)—The expropriation law enacted by the state legislatures of Vera Cruz deprived an American citizen of his property today.

By orders of Governor Adalberto J. Tejeda, 3000 acres of the banana plantation owned by Joseph Di Giorgio an American citizen, in the municipality of Cosamaloapan, were seized to form an Agrarian community.

SAFE-CRACKERS STEAL $825

Living away the caretaker with a fake call for milk, thieves broke into the office of the Whiting Milk Co., North Shore rd., near Beach st., Revere, and stole $500 in cash and $25 in stamps after forcing the safe.

They were unable to force an inner compartment which contained $1800.

The caretaker, Albert Mason of Washington st., Lynn, told police he had received a telephone call from a Lynn address requesting that several quarts of milk be delivered there. He found the address was false.

Pennsy Lines Tied Up by Rail Wreck

Trenton, N. J., July 27 (INS)—A spectacular wreck of a fast freight train tied up all five tracks of the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad at Millham Junction, northeast of Trenton, early today.

Twenty-one cars, of a string of 25, were derailed and scattered over the right of way. No one was injured.

SUICIDE IS LAID TO 3D DEGREE

Spring Lake Heights, N. J., July 27 (INS)—A pathetic farewell letter left by Mrs. Elsa Eckert, 27, who killed her daughter, Muriel, 6 and herself, in which she intimated her tragic act was indirectly precipitated by "third degree" methods used on her husband by the New Jersey state police, was found today.

Mrs. Eckert put the child in the back seat of her automobile in the garage, closed the doors of the building, then sat at the wheel after turning on the switch of the car. She and Muriel died from carbon monoxide fumes.

The letter, addressed to a newspaper, said Mrs. Eckert's husband, a shell-shocked war veteran, was mentally affected after a grilling to which he was subjected because of an automobile accident, and that he left home as a consequence.

FIRE DESTROYS LAKE RESORT

Manchester, N. H., July 27—The Manchenie Lake Pavilion, where hundreds of thousands of pleasure seekers have found entertainment for several decades, was destroyed today by a fire of mysterious origin.

The fire started at 7 a. m., six hours after the pavilion had closed and five hours before it was due to open again for the afternoon and evening. No one was in the huge building at the time.

Flames shooting high above the structure and heavy smoke rolling out over the lake brought hundreds of vacationists to the scene, many of them rowing across the lake from their camps or driving around by the crowded roads.

The pavilion housed a theater, a dance hall, a penny arcade, a waiting room and a refreshment room, and on the lake side was a long and wide observation platform.

SUMMERS WILL FIGHT CHARGES

Merle G. Summers, Boston insurance man, who has denied he knowingly defied a court order to restrain him from carrying out Nevada divorce proceedings, is returning here to fight the charges of his divorced wife, his attorneys stated today.

Summers secured a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Lura G. Summers in Las Vegas, Nev., a month ago and immediately afterward married his secretary, Miss Anne Kraus, of Dorchester.

Before he secured the decree, his wife filed suit for separate support in Middlesex Court and also secured a court order to enjoin him from continuing his divorce proceedings in Nevada.

Summers now declares, through his attorneys, that he knew nothing of his wife's suit for separate support and that he had not been served with the papers to restrain his divorce proceedings.

Believe Falls Victim Is Russian Dancer

Niagara Falls, N. Y., July 27 (AP)—The body of a man taken from the Niagara river at Lewiston today is at an undertaking establishment awaiting identification. Authorities think the body may be that of Nikolai Semanoff, Cleveland, noted Russian dancer, who was reported to have gone over the horseshoe falls on July 6.

YES, SHE'S COMING BACK TO AMERICA AFTER HER VISIT TO HOMELAND IN SWEDEN

These three closeup studies of Greta Garbo, glamorous star of the silver screen, were snapped by a New York Journal cameraman as Greta talked briefly of her plans for the future and her visit to her old home in Sweden. She is booked to sail from New York Saturday and plans to return to America in the early autumn, it was learned. The interview went something like this: Did she intend to return to America after her trip home? "Yes, I do." Was she planning to continue her screen career? "Yes, I am." Was it true she lost most of her fortune in Hollywood bank failures? "I don't know." Was she among the victims of Ivar Kreuger? "I really couldn't say.". It was learned from Hollywood, not from Greta, that when she returns her salary is to be $11,000 a week, or almost $600,000 a year.

GARBAGE WORK COST SCORED

Worcester, July 27—Garbage collection and disposal was scored as a "municipal luxury" by speakers at the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Public Health, meeting today in the Worcester County Club.

Edward Wright of the State Department of Health stated that the cost of handling refuse and garbage by the 39 cities in 1930 exceeded the total expenses of their individual health departments by 12 per cent, while in 15 of the larger towns the collection and disposal costs was 93 per cent of the entire public health expenses.

Wright said this work is now financed under the board of health budget although it has a less direct connection with public health than sewerage. Yet, he said, no community in the country has a sewerage system moperated by the board of health.

Public Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow complained that the board of health, because of the depression, is ordering routinely all tuberculosis patients out of sanitoria at the end of the six months and refusing to admit new ones for more than one month.

Commission O. K.'s Extra-Fare Trains

Washington, July 27 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today approved extra fare passenger trains as now operated by railroads which have them.

This decision follows an investigation of extra fare trains begun some time ago by the commission on its own motion. There had been complaints that fares in some instances were too high as compared with rates to other cities.

2 HELD IN DEATH PREDICTED BY MYSTIC CARDS

Chicago, July 27 (INS)—Mrs. Vera Frances Carl, who drew three mystic picture cards foretelling her husband's death three days before it occurred, was in jail today, facing possible murder charges.

Her brother, Ivan Grilec, also was arrested.

Both were held to the grand jury by a coroner's jury which concluded an inquest with the finding that George Carl's strangely predicted death was dealt by a revolver in the hands of either his wife or his brother-in-law.

Louis L. Gould, counsel for the pair, said there was no evidence to link his clients with the murder.

Carl was found by his wife shot to death in the rear of his grocery store July 18. Three days before the murder Mrs. Carl had sought the advice of Mrs. Susie Ballo, an amateur fortune teller, on whether to undergo an operation.

From Mrs. Ballo's symbolic pack of cards Mrs. Carl said she drew three, first the picture of a white-robed skeleton, second the representation of a widow mourning at a grave, and third, the portrayal of an inquiring magistrate. Thus, the cards foretold the violent death of the grocer.

Investigation included the reenactment of this session with the seeress and the questioning of Mrs. Carl and her brother with the use of the lie-detector.

SALES TAX PLAN WINS SUPPORT OF EXPERT

Indianapolis, July 27—"The sales tax is not only logical and necessary but it is inevitable and will become a law of the United States within eighteen months," Walter Schrage, who for sixteen years was mayor of Whiting and who is considered one of the most astute public minds in northern Indiana, said today.

Schrage is a Republican in politics but declares that the question of domestic taxation should be nonpartisan.

He asserted that he had examined all the tax bills now before the Indiana legislature and was convinced that the only really constructive one was the Hoffman senate bill which provides for a one-half of one per cent tax on retail sales.

Schrage, who is a banker, said that he considers William Randolph Hearst's attitude in favor of a manufacturers' sales tax "an unselfish gesture from a great public man." He said:

"If Mr. Hearst, who has everything to lose by a national sales tax and nothing whatever to gain by it, can support such legislation, then certainly the rank and file who stand and to gain by a return to normalcy in taxation can afford to stand back of the publisher.

Speaky Owners to Head Geo. Jean Nathan's Party

New York, July 27—For President and Vice-President of the United States—Jack and Charlie—(series of heeyah, heeyah from a little guy in the corner)—nominated by George Jean Nathan, drama critic, author, returning traveler to these shores and politico-sociological scholar.

Jack and Charlie, Nathan hastened to explain, as he lounged in his stateroom in the Ile de France yesterday, are his favorite speakeasy proprietors. The speakeasy, continued Nathan, is the one industry in the country which is perfectly managed. Ergo, if Jack and Charlie can make money out of a speakeasy, running the government ought to be as easy for them as piping up beer from the cellar, Nathan said:

"The speakeasy makes money and what other business does? Neither Mr. Hoover nor Mr. Mellon could take over a speakeasy and run it profitably. As a matter of fact, the speakeasies have helped Hoover. The people don't care so much about politics when they are in speakeasies."

One-Man Relief Squad

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

He's leaving footprints on the sands of time but they've got round heels.

He is asking for a conference to talk over debts which he claims don't exist. He wants to help the farmer by putting his foot on the hay scales. He insists on reducing foreign armies and navies 50 per cent. Which is like putting your head in the neighbor's window to criticize a dinner to which you haven't been invited.

He has grander schemes than a sophomore fibbing to a pretty girl at a summer resort. He is in the Polish corridor, the Soviet vestibule, the Lausanne hallway and the insurgent alley. He's doing more expert juggling than a cross-eyed Mandarin trying to eat huckleberries with chopsticks.

He says he will take us around the corner. But we'd rather stay where we are than make the trip on two wheels.

And as to his international economic conferences, something buzzes us that it would be more economic for us if they didn't hold it.

BURNS TO DEATH IN PADDED CELL

Bridgeport, Ct., July 27 (AP)—A Trumbull farmer described by police as crazed by drink was burned to death in a padded cell at police headquarters under circumstances that led today to two investigations.

Superintendent of Police Charles Wheeler, who launched one of the investigations, expressed the opinion the farmer, Michael Mastrovitch, 30, had set the fire with suicidal intent or to gain his release from the cell.

BOY KILLED BY ARMY TRUCK

Providence, July 27 (INS)—Crushed between two army trucks as they were about to start for the summer training quarters of the 118th Engineers (National Guard) at Quonsett Point, Pvt. John G. Boron, 19, was killed today, and his companion, Pvt. George Makin, 19, was probably fatally injured.

'VOICE' TOLD ASSASSIN TO KILL DOUMER

Paris, July 27—"Kill him and then die a hero!"

A mysterious voice whispered those words in his ear a short while before he assassinated President Paul Doumer of France, Dr. Paul Gorguloff, Russian expatriate, testified at his trial today.

The high point of the proceedings came when the prisoner stalked to the witness stand and told his story of the crime.

"I needed courage to kill the President, who had never done anything to me," Gorguloff said. "So just before the assassination I drank a bottle of brandy and six glasses of wine. As I drank, I sat listening to the voice which said in my ear:

"'Kill him and then die a hero!'"

Gorguloff shook off the torpor in which he dozed during yesterday's session when alienists bickered about his sanity and walked to the stand seemingly intent upon a prideful exposition of his slaying of the 75-year-old President for the sake of a chimerical "ideal."

His attorney asked that the court permit the jury to decide on the defendant's sanity. The prosecution objected, asserting that the jury should determine only two questions—whether Gorguloff killed the President and whether the crime was premeditated.

The Russian leaped to his feet.

"Take my life!" he cried, "lay me on the guillotine! The French government has killed my ideal and my party. I am a living corpse. I do not want to live!"

At the conclusion of his testimony, his wife was ushered into the courtroom, supported by two attendants. With head bowed, she walked to the witness stand and gave her testimony amid hysterical sobs.

As she began to talk, Gorguloff stretched out both his arms and attempted to climb out of the dock to embrace her.

"Anne, Anne, my darling," he cried. Guards forced him back into his seat and Mme. Gorguloff continued her testimony.

She testified that he was a good husband and that until a few days before the assassination was perfectly normal. Then he seemed queer.

A few days before Gorguloff left her in Monaco and went up to Paris they went to a movie together, she said. President Doumer appeared in a news reel and her husband applauded. He told her he admired the President.

"I can't imagine why he killed him," she said, "and I can't understand these reports that he was cruel to his former wives. He has been so good to me."

SHOTS FAIL TO HALT BURGLARS

After a chase in the vicinity of Loyola st., Roxbury, early today, in which several shots were fired, three burglars escaped.

Neighbors telephoned police that three men were breaking into the Laurel Bottling Co. on Loyola st. When the police arrived, the trio were seen to leave the rear of the building.

$30 WEEK CLERK ROBS $650,000

New York, July 27 (INS)—Swept from the playgrounds of the rich, where he confessed he maintained himself by embezzling $650,000 over a period of years, a "trusted clerk" sat in the opulent offices of his employers, J. S. Bache & Co., today, aiding accountants uncover his vast defalcations.

The lure of night clubs, the excitement of horse racing and the frenzied money making possible in stock gyrations, the middle-aged man admitted, led him systematically to rob his firm for 14 years

GRETCHEN BREMER

Everyone, of course, was simply stunned at the sad news of George Barton's sudden death . . . sympathy is pouring in to his attractive fiancee, Evelyn Hollingsworth, daughter of the Amor Hollingsworths of Milton, and his two popular aunts, Mrs. William B. Ladd and Mrs. Warren Motley, who are so well known for their great interest in local philanthropies.

Gretchen Bremer, whose parents, the Clifton Bremers, have taken a house in Milton for the summer, is dividing her time between town and seashore, spending the greater part of the week at Cohasset visiting Dr. and Mrs. George Badger's lovely place . . . you know, Virginia Badger will be her sister-in-law in the fall, as her marriage to Frank Bremer, Gretchen's brother, takes place in September . . . and Uncle Johnny Knowles' beautiful seaside villa, "Bob" Knowles' rich relative. Robert, her fiance, is concentrating on being prepared for the Big Boom when it comes . . . oh, when? . . . by attending a popular business school during the summer months. He is going to enter the army of money-makers in the fall.

Popular Rendezvous for Society Folk

EACH SEASON FINDS A NEW PLACE OF INTEREST for the young set on the Cape . . . This year it appears that the Theater Unit at Silver Beach, Falmouth, takes first honors. It is a sort of dinner, dancing, theater and night club and many gay parties have been heard of starting early and ending . . . early.

ONE MERRY GROUP GATHERED at the unit on Saturday night to give Marie Lesh and Abbott Peterson a "time" . . . It was composed of the bridal party and friends and was quite delightfully informal. Marie and Abbott pledge their vows today at Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel at 4 o'clock.

At Nantucket

MR. AND MRS. "HAMMEY" HEARD and their small daughter, "Kay," are spending the summer with Mrs. Heard's parents, the Karl Adamses, at Nantucket Island. Mr. Adams is fond of islands . . . he spends a good deal of his time between Nantucket Island and Adams Island in Boston Harbor. This latter island belonged to his father, the late Melvin O. Adams, and many gay stag parties have taken place THERE in times past . . . !

On Staff

MR. ADAMS IS CONNECTED with the City Hospital now and Adams Island makes an ideal place to go between duties. His son, Karl, Jr., is a senior at Harvard, and daughter, Katharine, is an officer of the Vincent Club. Her cousin, Karolyn Samson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos H. Samson, will be one of the debutantes of the winter, so she should have easy entre into this exclusive coterie. Both cousins look enough alike to be sisters . . . the Samsons are all dark and handsome.

Going to Maine

MR. AND MRS. FRANCES BRADLEY will spend August with the Dudley Howes, Mrs. Bradley's parents, at Dark Harbor, Maine. Life there is choice . . . large estates, only one small INN which holds quality, not quantity. There is another attractive daughter in the Howes family, Phyllis, who is tall, dark, slender and full of PEP.

Entertains

MRS. LESTER LELAND OF Beacon st. is entertaining Mrs. John T. Wheelwright at the Lelands' very handsome estate at Manchester-by-the-Sea. The Lelands have no young folks, so they are free to go, do and give freely, for which they are noted. They entertain gorgeously, and much will be done for Mrs. "Jack" Wheelwright. Her Boston friends will be delighted to meet her again after two years in Washington.

Back From Reno

AND SPEAKING OF WESTON, have you heard that Mrs. Burnham Lewis has returned from Reno with a divorce on which the ink is scarcely dry and a brand new husband. Nobody knows his name and apparently nobody cares to . . . meow! meow! However, this fascinating little lady is going to sit right on the horns of her dilemma . . . she had rented a house among her old playmates . . . and she says if they don't like it they can move. She is there for three years . . . tossing her pretty light hair.

MARIE LESH BRIDE OF ABBOT PETERSON, JR.

Ritz-Carlton Is Scene of Reception

The principal society event today is the marriage of Miss Marie Lesh to Mr. Abbot Peterson, Jr., which takes place in Leslie Lindsay Memorial Chapel at 4 o'clock.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Frederick Lesh, of 12 Chestnut st. For the ceremony she is wearing her mother's wedding gown of saffon satin with pleated chiffon puffed sleeves, antique net veil with old family lace head dress, and is carrying yellow Perne roses and jasmine bouvardue.

In Bridal Party

Mrs. James H. Watkins of Atlanta, Georgia (Martha Lesh), sister of the bride, is her matron of honor, and is wearing a gown of water blue chiffon with blue chiffon turban, Patou model, and a bouquet of Joanne Hill roses and larkspur. Her four bridesmaids, Miss Ann Peterson, the bridegroom's sister, Miss Elizabeth Johnes, of South Orange, New Jersey, Miss June Wilbar and Miss Helen Dearing, both of Newton Center, are wearing coral chiffon with hand tucked bodice and coral turbans, their bouquets being of Joanne Hill roses and delphinium in dark shades.

Mrs. Lesh accompanies her daughter to the altar, wearing a beautiful Chanel model with a turban to match in sea foam green, while Mrs. Peterson, who will accompany her, chose a Patou model in cream and flowered chiffon.

The bridegroom's father, the Rev. Abbot Peterson, officiates at the ceremony, and Mr. Adam Rhodes of Brookline is the best man. The ushers include Mr. Elliot R. Hedge and Mr. Charles R. Strickland, both of Brookline; Mr. Morris Faxon Whorf of West Newton, Mr. Edward R. Laughlin of Greenwich Conn.; Dr. John Lesh Jacobs of New York and Mr. David Woodman Norton, Jr. of Wellesley Hills.

At Ritz-Carlton

On leaving on their honeymoon the bride is to be gowned in a black and white "Miller Soeur," large black mohair hat, with white bands. Mr. and Mrs. Abbot Peterson, Jr., will be at home to their many friends at Hingham, on October 1.

Miss Lesh, who made her social debut in the season of 1930-31, was a student at the Beaver Country Day School, and also studied art in Rome. She has been specializing in metal work at the school of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The bridegroom was a member of the class of 1930 at Harvard, where he is now being studied as Oxford University, England, and is a student at the Harvard Theological School.

Ralph Hornblowers Entertain at Dinner in Plymouth Home

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hornblower gave a delightful dinner Saturday night at their home in Plymouth for a group of their friends before the dance at the Eel River Beach Club.

Mrs. Hornblower has achieved a very beautiful garden where her guests assembled for pre-dinner refreshments. The garden combines the formal beauty of the flower garden with a very beautiful pool gracing the lower terrace, and a wealth of exquisite flowers that cast their reflections into the still waters of the pool, pink and white phlox, and the slender and delicate yellow day lilies, Japanese iris, and the tall cerulean blue of the larkspur, purple of the turks cap, and this cloud of color and shapefulness is mirrored in the pool.

About the garden is the informal and natural beauty of the pine woods where lay the golden and purple shadows of the evening. The scene was full of charm as the guests wandered about the garden in the evening light.

The second terrace of the garden constitutes a bowling green, the perfect smoothness of the lawn makes a delightful spot to bowl and many of the guests bowled before dinner was served.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greenwood, Mr. and Mrs. Kingsbury Browne, Miss Katharine Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Strickland and Miss Jane Strickland, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Greenwood, Messrs. Frank and Joseph Holmes, Mrs. LeBaron Barker and Dr. and Mrs. Halsey Loder and their charming family.

It was an altogether delightful occasion. Mrs. Hornblower, who is a most charming hostess, sang for her guests, and needless to say with such a delightful beginning everyone had a joyous evening at the Beach Club afterward. They danced old fashioned square dances as well as the modern dances and that is always a lot of fun. Just one of those nicer of evenings taken all in all.

Among many well known ladies who have sent in their names for tables there, are Mrs. William T. Aldrich, Mrs. Henry L. Benson, Miss Louis Curtis, Mrs. Elizabeth Barke, Mrs. J. Howard Edwards, Mrs. Frank C. Nichols and Mrs. Philip Young.

Assisting Mrs. Proctor as hostesses are Mrs. Arthur Perry, Mrs. Henry H. Perry, Mrs. Robert L. Goodale, Mrs. Max L. Talbot, Mrs. Charles Putnam Smith, Miss Katherine Wellman and Miss Harriet Houghton.

Don't Call Me Prince, Says Siam King's Son

San Francisco, July 27 (AP)—Prince M. R. Chakratong Tong-Yai, cousin of the King of Siam, doesn't want to be called "Prince." Arriving to study at Cornell, he explained he wanted to be Democratic.

"I don't want to be burdened," he said, "with a title."

Campbells on Trip Abroad

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Campbell, of 333 Lee st., Brookline, are spending the summer in Scotland. They are accompanied by their three children, the Misses Helena and Stephanie Edgell and Mr. Stephen Edgell.

Mrs. Campbell is the sister of Mr. William Aldrich, commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club on the North Shore. Mrs. Campbell's sister is Mrs. John D. Rockerfellar.

Mr. Campbell is doing exceedingly interesting work in the field of sculpture. His studio is in town rather than near his home, as is the case of his talented neighbor, Mr. Philip Sears.

Summer Centers of Social Life—the North Shore

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

Just as there are resorts for every season in the year so too there are resorts for every sort of person. Lakewood for instance means golf season—The Thousand Islands are the playground for Pittsburgh and Cleveland millionaires. Even if there is a perfectly settled cottage that one may go to when the bad weather comes it is fun to know of the other places and other attractions.

The world is nomadic today with the facility of travel made so by the well kept roads and the ubiquitous motor. Distance presents no difficulties to the traveler's whims. All along the coast from Maine to the tip end of Cape Cod are little charming spots where we nomads and gypsies may be lured to stay the night or picnic. The hospitality of the countryside is apparent.

All along the way charming old fashioned country homes open their doors to tourists (of course for a price) but the hotel is not what it used to be. At one time they really achieved the highwayman act in a quiet and dignified way, but robbery never the less, today the tourist has so many delightful choices that he need not submit himself to extortions.

Perhaps there is not one among the many American resorts the individual characteristics of which are so markedly unique as those of the North Shore. There is a charming antiquity about the North Shore that is very appealing. Glimpses of beautiful estates with cool green well kept lawns, shaded by age old stately trees meet the eye.

Manchester, Beverly, Hamilton, Topsfield, all famous for their delightful summer colonies who seem to have learned the secret of having a delightful time, and surrounding themselves with beauty and charm.

They have horse shows, polo matches, tennis, boat racing, and a tremendous following it has. The waters of Marblehead are dotted with white sails atilt against the aquamarine sea, and the younger crowd especially go in for this wholesome and healthful sport.

Then there are Nahant, Swampscott, and Pride's Crossing, all picturesque and charming. Here are delightful inns and hospitable clubhouses. County fairs are held and gaieties of every kind hold the interest and fire the imagination of the summer sojourners. It is a spot of country house parties and weekends with lavish entertaining.

Perhaps it is clannish, but so are all country neighborhoods.

Relics of By-Gone Days Treasured in Grandma's Bonnet Box

Lately there has been a great interest in collecting band boxes. It may be that people have gone to the attic more often of late to find cast off clothes and articles of apparel laid away in camphor, for in these days of depression one's thoughts turn more "to what have we on hand" than to what shall we buy today, and in these attic searches treasures untold that are reminiscent of the past are revealed. It is remarkable that these fascinating old boxes have not caught the eye of the dealer long before because there are only a few of them in existance.

In the olden days these treasured band boxes were esteemed great treasures. They were never common, every-day things given away freely with the purchase of a hat as hat boxes are today. They were sold for handsome prices by band box makers who were also wallpaper dealers.

The old band boxes which are illustrated are very interesting specimens. They were huge, measuring across the top 22 by 18 inches. The colors made of lasting vegetable dyes were rich and very beautiful and the design most unique and interesting. Often there were lanscapes and foreign castles with formal gardens that led to white marble steps.

One lovely one owned by a prominent society lady has a background of soft lead tone and the figures are in black and white. The whole is beautifully set off by the border of the cover which represents a row of heads in gold against a field of orange tone.

So carefully were our great grandmothers of their band boxes that when they were travelling they put about them a generous bag to protect them. A band box was taken by every woman on her travels when there were no expresses or railroads, just stage coaches, all trunks were therefore small, and hats and bonnets were never carried in them but rather in the band boxes which could be taken inside the stage coach.

So the band box was an institution of no mean importance and was greatly respected. Today these precious relics of a by-gone day are held as great treasures and given an exalted place of honor in the household as an ornament of priceless beauty.

They are delightful and have about them a romance and glamor, these bonnet boxes of the ladies of a by-gone day.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

Another book on Russia! They pour from the publishers' presses in a steady cascade, and one is sometimes bewildered as to what is happening in the land of Stalin.

I have read Waldo Frank's "Dawn in Russia" (Scribner) with unusual interest, because here, for the first time, I have found some information that I have long sought in other volumes. He tells how writers, actors and artists in the cinema live and work—a phase of the Soviet system which other travelers have oddly enough failed to mention.

After giving a brief picture of Hollywood and the methods pursued there he asks us to step into the home of a Russian motion picture actress. He says:

"She lives, of course, in a single room. The table at which she serves us supper is beside the bed of herself and her husband; the oil stove where she has prepared it with her own hands is behind a white sheet in a corner. Her collation consists of a delicious omelette, beet and cucumber salad, black bread and jam, and Caucasian wine.

"Emma Vladimirovna wears a severe black dress, cotton stockings and a single ring—an heirloom—on her exquisite hand. She is a girl soberly devoted to her work, who accepts life as a hard place from which one wins experience, pain, joy, even ecstasy, not 'success.' Yet she is ambitious, she loves to be praised. But when she shows you the 'stills' of her new picture you think of a schoolgirl rather than a star, so simple is her anxiety for approval; and of an artist, so true is her standard of values.

"Behind her in a large bookcase of unpainted wood, containing translations of the classics and all the great Russians from Pushkin and Aksakov to Bunin. At the table sits a Communist deputy from Paris, a New York journalist, a couple of young Soviet officials, two girls and myself. The talk is both gay and deep. Here no one is afraid to speak his mind, for everyone's place in the scheme of things is sure. The humble room is integral with Russia; its life is close with what it means to Russia."

He tells of the Author's Club in Moscow, where he went for a drink. There was a tennis court in the garden, but upstairs Gorki was making a speech. The windows were shut, and the room was packed to the sills. The heat was almost unbearable, but no one noticed it except Mr. Frank. To have opened a window would have let in the racket from the garden. Gorki's voice was weak, and these men and women were there to hear Gorki. Even their breath came silently as the hundreds of eyes bore unswervingly upon the frail, gaunt man before them.

"His face is intellectually vapid, and his blouse hangs loose about his throat and shoulders. He looks like a Russian saint whom many years of moral discipline have so removed from intellectual problems that he need no longer choose—no longer think. Yet he is thinking.

"He furrows his brow, brings an emphatic fist against the table. He must think, not to find the truth, but to express it . . . Gorki, whose work may have been lacking in esthetic depth, was always massively human; yet now he seemed almost a feminine figure!

"The reader may laugh when I say that he reminded me of a bride: within the wrinkled body of this man was a spirit that had surrendered too great force, and in surrender had found the peace of ecstasy. Gorki was blissful. Each day he wrote his paean for the papers; on numberless subjects, but forever with one refrain. The man of bitterness had found a happy ending for his bitter stories."

Mr. Frank is not afraid to tell of the strange, sad faces he saw among the workers. Everyone was concerned, naturally enough, with the blossoming of the flower; but he had gone to Russia to know the dark root. He found it, in a sense, though his sojourn was brief. He says that if one does not see happiness in Russia one should bear in mind that the Revolution is still too young to have changed the Russian people deeply.

The young are moved today by an enthusiasm that may not last; the old are caught in a despair that will not survive them. The adult mass whose formative years go back of 1917 are still conservative, easily led, servile in their ancestral habit of being ruled. It must hence be clear that neither the joy nor the misery visible in Russia today can be taken as a permanent trait.

He found the class-conscious workers happy. The office holders are happy, when their background is proletarian. The youth in town, farm and school are happy. He detected signs of crisis in the youth; a certain unrest due probably to the fear that their personality is suffering. This is why there is much drunkenness among the young men, and explains a certain febrile over-compensation in their performance of Communist tasks.

The whole book is exquisitely written, and will give you the best picture you can find of Russia as it exists today.

INDIA FIGHTS TARIFF MOVE AGAINST U. S.

Ottawa, Ont., July 27 (UB)—The spirit of economic revolt which has threatened the aims of Britain's imperial trade conference was augmented today by India, which has the largest population in the empire—more than 300,000,000 people.

In an interview with Universal Service, Sir Atul Chatterjee, head of India's delegation to the conference and one of the most eminent Hindu statesmen, said his country will object to any tariff plan which would affect India's trade with United States.

WOULD SPUR WORLD TRADE

He added that he believes whatever economic action is taken by the conference should be followed by international action to stimulate world-wide trade.

Sir Atul's declaration came as the tariff bartering between Great Britain and her brood of dominions proceeded in secret committee sessions.

India's stand makes the eventual settlement of the proposal for a preferential tariff wall around the far-flung British empire more difficult than ever.

Canada, Australia, and South Africa have already delivered ultimatums to the mother country on the subject. The Irish Free State has a private battle with England and is not expected to agree to anything.

Explaining that the British empire cannot absorb the entire exportable surplus of India, Sir Atul who was educated at Cambridge, said:

MEAT PRODUCTS DISCUSSED

"Naturally we do not wish to do anything which will affect our markets with foreign countries such as the United States."

The various dominions' demands for a greater share of the British home market in meats and meat products were considered by a special subcommittee, but after a session of several hours they decided "to explore further."

Great Britain is moving cautiously because of her vast trade and investments in Argentine, from which she now imports most of her meat.

The situation also affects America, for Britain last year imported $38,000,000 worth of meat from the United States.

12 HURT IN BIG QUINCY TANK EXPLOSION

close to the tank when it exploded and were about to enter it to clean it out. The gasoline had been removed, leaving the fumes, which exploded from some undetermined cause.

The ground trembled as the huge tank was ripped asunder. Men and girl clerks in other parts of the plant ran out of buildings, believing lightning had struck the place.

Windows were shattered in every house in the vicinity and in many much farther away. Pictures crashed to the floor, dishes were broken, and plaster rained from the ceilings and walls.

Telephone calls poured into the Boston Evening American switchboard from persons as far away as Cohasset, and from scores living in all parts of Quincy and the surrounding towns.

THOUGHT IT NAVAL DEPOT

Many thought the naval ammunition depot in Hingham had exploded, their houses trembled so under the force of the blast.

More explosions were feared from the flames, which were dangerously close to the other 27 storage tanks on the oil company's property.

Windows and doors rattled in dwellings all over Weymouth, Hingham and Braintree, and as far away in the other direction as the Hough's Neck section of Quincy, alarming women occupants everywhere.

The burst of flame and smoke, aftermath of the explosion, was seen 10 miles away, attracting motorists to the scene. The jam of autos in Quincy ave. required police from Quincy, Braintree and the state constabulary to straighten out.

Campbell and DeSilva, who were nearest the tank, were stunned by the shock of the blast, and their fellow-workmen were all flung to the ground. The latter managed to get to the street, dragging the two seriously injured men. Passing autos took them to the hospital.

The huge cover of the tank soared 30 feet into the air, while the body of the receptacle was twisted from its concrete foundation and completely wrecked.

Alden and Doherty were at work in a small building nearby and were covered with broken glass from the windows.

Fire apparatus was called from Quincy and Braintree to assist the company's private fire department in fighting the flames and preventing a spread to other tanks, containing millions of gallons of gasoline.

The shock was so great near the big storage farm that several women in houses in the vicinity fainted from fright.

ENORMOUS DAMAGE

Canned goods and other merchandise was knocked from all the shelves in a chain grocery store in Quincy ave., and a large hole was smashed in the roof of Fogg's garage.

Police, receiving reports from all over the South Shore, said that the total damage to houses would run into thousands of dollars.

An inspector from the office of the state fire marshal was dispatched to the scene to make a thorough investigation of the cause.

The fact that the wrecked tank was situated in a depression saved the nearby houses from more serious damage, and the occupants from injury, it is believed.

Many residents of the South Shore district, hearing or feeling the force of the blast, feared that if it wasn't the ammunition depot it might cause explosion of powder there.

The full force of the explosion seemed to follow the water through Town and Fore rivers and along the coast line. Nine boats were swept from their moorings off Quincy and North Weymouth, and a number of residents of North Weymouth reported plaster fell from their ceilings.

TERRIFIED BY TANK BLAST

Group of children who live in the house, 61 and 61A Glenrose st., close by the scene of the gas tank explosion in East Braintree today. All were terrified by the tremendous roar of the blast and several were knocked down by its force. Their house was badly damaged. The children are Virginia, Richard, Russell, Dorothy and Sylvia Anderson and Gerard and William Nevell. (Staff photo.)

RED PLOTS TO WRECK BANKS REVEALED

Pontiac, Mich., July 27—Details of an alleged plot of Communists to wreck banks in a number of cities were made public today by Capt. Ira Marmon of State police.

He revealed a trap had been set here for George Rowland, alias Salzman, alleged ringleader of the local group, but that Rowland evaded it.

Investigators made public a letter intercepted by police and alleged to have been written by Rowland. It said in part:

BIG RUNS PLANNED

"Our telephone propaganda is working wonderful. I have considered this program for a simultaneous run against all these institutions throughout the country and can see that it would be almost the final blow against the banks, but I cannot see how we can get them going at the same time. Believe me, Comrade, I sure have the president of the bank here on the verge of a nervous breakdown."

Marmon said agents of the ring, going into a new city, obtained names of the business men from the city directory, called them and warned the banks in which their money was deposited were unsound.

The names of firms and individuals having large accounts in the First national Bank here were found in lists seized in a raid on Rowland's room.

Another letter, which had been written to Rowland by "Comrade HG" at Cleveland, read:

NEW CAMPAIGN BARED

"Following your instructions to me, I am writing to give you as clear a picture as possible of our campaign against the banks in this district.

"You low it is a slow proposition to get people steamed up for a run. However, your telephone program seems to be working out fine. There is considerable unrest here and we are informed by clerks in both the Union Trust and the Cleveland Trust that the depositors are very nervous. We have tried to keep up the good work."

DEATH SHIP'S DIVE TOLD

craft dipped low and the wind whipped the seas into a fury.

We had hardly strung up our answer to the Niobe's queries when the schooner capsized and sank.

I immediately ordered the Theresa Russ to proceed to the scene at full speed, preparing the lifeboats on the way. When we were close enough, the boats were dropped to the water and my entire crew, with the exception of myself and the cook, struck out to rescue the shipwrecked men.

CLING TO OARS

One by one we picked up the cadets and the members of the Niobe's crew who had been thrown clear of the schooner. All the officers with the exception of Capt. Kuhfuss and Lieut. Lott were drowned. Many of the 36 men we rescued were forced to swim for more than an hour before we could get to them. Some clung to oars and pieces of floating wreckage while waiting for our lifeboats to reach them.

A number of the rescued were in a serious condition, including the Niobe's cook, who was badly burned by scalding water when his galley turned upside down. Another suffered a broken right arm.

At the moment of the catastrophe the majority of the personnel were in the lower quarters at their lessons. Only six of these cadets were saved.

FAMILY RESCUE

We gave what aid we could to the rescued men as they were taken aboard the Theresa Russ. Many of them were naked. They stripped off their clothing to facilitate swimming while awaiting rescue.

While we were engaged in the rescue work, a launch arrived on the scene commanded by the brother of Lieut. Lott. The brother had the satisfaction of rescuing the lieutenant himself.

For four hours we cruised about the scene of the disaster. There was no sign of the Niobe save for the bubbles rising to the surface.

—With GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

The Flying Finns. Again They Loom. Why They Excel.

No Ford; No Baseball. They Use Their Limbs. Track National Sport.

FATHER JARVINEN'S FOUR STURDY SONS

NO HENRY FORD; no baseball. That's your answer why little Finland, scarcely bigger than most of our separate states, and not the British Empire, the republic of France, mighty Germany, or other great nations, is expected to give the United States the keenest competition in the great international sports battle yclept the Olympic Games. The automobile scarcely has invaded Finland. The Finns still walk, still develop and exercise their natural engines of locomotion. They don't go dippy over baseball, football and golf, like we Americans do. They started concentrating on track and field sports after the first Olympic Games in Athens in 1896, had a high powered athletic organization developed prior to the Stockholm Olympics of 1912. The track and field sport is the national pastime of the Finns. They have no sideshows to wean away or divide their attention and efforts. They concentrate solely on athletics. Bending all efforts on athletics the little nation of Northern Europe has come to challenge the athletic supremacy of the United States and Great Britain, the two mightiest nations of the earth.

IF YOU know your athletic onions you will see that in the great games which start next Saturday little Finland has roseate chances of scoring in ten, perhaps 12 of the outstanding track and field events. That's about as much as Uncle Sam is expected will do and more than John Bull and Canada, which are much larger than little Finland bag even a pair of firsts they will consider themselves lucky.

FINLAND'S greatest strength is, as usual, in the distance events. For the 1500 meter, 5000 meter, 10,000 meter, the steeplechase and the Marathon they can throw a remarkable array of distance men on to the firing line. The names of all these Finnish distance men are names to conjure with as well as twist the tongue—Paavo Nurmi, Harry Larva, Eino Purje, Lauri Lehtinen, Volmari Iso-Hollo, Lasse Virtanen and Vernari Tervonen. They have all made athletic history. They will make more at Los Angeles.

AS IN THE distance events the Finns long have been supreme with the javelin. Matti Jarvinen is top heavy favorite for the javelin in Los Angeles. He's one of four brothers, the sons of Finland's first Olympic victor, Verner Jarvinen, "Father of Finnish Athletics." More about the Jarvinens anon. Another of the Jarvinen brothers, Akilles, is with his countryman, Paavo Yrjeler, considered a sure point winner in the decathlon. Villa Perhola won the shot put at the Antwerp Olympics. Now he looms up as one of the world's greatest hammer throwers and questions the supremacy of Dr. O'Callaghan of Ireland and our American flingers.

WE AMERICANS long have considered the hurdle event as labelled Uncle Sam and all wrapped up and bound around with a woolen string. But this year there is a Flying Finn to threaten the supremacy of our Yankee timber-toppers in the 110-meter hurdles. It's Sjostedt. This fellow Sjostedt has scaled the high fences in 14 2-5 seconds. We have looked upon our American fence flyers, Jack Keller, George Salin and Percy Beard as invincible. But they can't be considered invincible as long as a fellow with a 14 2-5 seconds mark like Sjostedt, the Finn, is going to answer the call to post.

SID ATKINSON of South Africa, taught us Americans a valuable hurdling lesson at the last Olympic Games. Prior to the games we Yankees thought we were going to clean up in the hurdles. It looked like one, two and three, for the American fence flyers, Steve Anderson, Leighten Dyer and Johnny Collier. But along came that dark horse from South Africa who showed the Americans over the fences in the new world's and Olympic record wrecking time of 14 4-5 seconds. Remember Sjostedt, the Finn, has bettered Atkinson's Olympic figures by two-fifths of a second. As long as that Flying Finn is going to face the starter we Americans better not count our Olympic hurdling chickens until they are hatched.

OVER ON this side of the pond, the Kolehmainens with the two brothers, Hannes and Viller, cleaning up in amateur and professional competition, were thought to be Finland's greatest athletic family. But the Jarvinens have come to overshadow the deeds of the Kolehmainens. There are four brothers, Yrje, the oldest, a javelin thrower; Kalle, the shot-putter; Akilles, the all around champion and favorite for the Olympic decathlon contest, and Matti, the youngest, the holder of the world's record with the javelin. They are the sons of Verner Jarvinen, Finland's first Olympic victor and the "Father of Finnish Athletics."

VERNER JARVINEN first caught American eyes with his victory in the Greek style discus throw at the Athens Olympics in 1906. In the same meet Jarvinen output the great Martin Sheridan—green be the turf above him—with the shot, but the judges declared that Jarvinen's form was in violation of the rules and the Finn's put was not allowed. Jarvinen was born with knee trouble and is stiff legged. He achieved all his remarkable success with the shot, discus and javelin despite the handicap.

"IF HE COULD get a proper pivot on that leg of his," Martin Sheridan once remarked of Verner Jarvinen, "he would smash world's records with shot as well as discus." Jarvinen and Sheridan divided discus honors at the Athens Olympics of 1906, the American winning the free style competition and the Finn capturing the Greek style event.

AKILLES JARVINEN was a year old when his father won his first Olympic triumph at Athens. It is too bad that Martin Sheridan couldn't have lived to have seen young Akilles develop into a world's record holder. Four stalwart sons have carried on for the elder Jarvinen. Two of the four Jarvinen brothers, Akilles and Matti, are likely to romp away with the highest honors in the javelin and decathlon at next week's big games in Los Angeles. They are great sons of a great father. Like Martin Sheridan, Mattie Jarvinen is a "Son of Mars."

JUNIORS OPEN GOLF TITLE GRIND

By BILL GRIMES

Early this morning an army of youngsters converged on the Wollaston Golf Club to play in or watch the qualifying round of the annual Massachusetts junior championship.

The contestants were only a minor portion of the large gathering, for each player was accompanied by a caddy and at least a couple of pals, who this evening will have the inside dope on why he did or did not make one of the 32 match play berths.

Some of the more fortunate contenders for the title which Bill Donnelly, Jr., was obliged to let go by default, arrived in the cars of liveried chauffeurs, others were driven to the battle field by proud fathers or nervous mothers some drove themselves with all the pals they could pile in, a few hitchhiked and some walked from the nearest car line.

It was the usual cosmopolitan gathering which attends the qualifying round of the junior classic. Most of the players were sporting the finest equipment, but in some cases the clubs, bags and even the balls were borrowed for the occasion. Others were playing with four or five clubs, with warped shafts, dangling windings, loose heads and unraveling grips.

JOE O'HARE STARTS PLAY

Promptly at 8:30, Joe O'Hare, a youngster from Hatherly, started the ball rolling and the remainder of the contestants followed the first threesome at five minute intervals. O'Hare was playing with Chris Larkin, from Chestnut Hill, and Dick Koons, Stoney Brae, who qualified at Sandy Burr a year ago.

There are two sets of twins in this year's junior championship, the Martins, from Oakley and the Pembrokes, from Colonial, and due to the remarkable resemblances, they attracted considerable attention.

Although many boys who have featured in junior championships for the past three or four years have been graduated, the 1932 field is one of the fastest in years. Of the 16 players who weathered the first round of match play last season, eleven of them are at Wollaston today.

There is no outstanding favorite. Wollaston is banking on Bobby Hopkins and Charlie Pickering; Worcester has its Wilfred Ogg, Thorny Lea its Francis Shields, South Shore is back of Stanley Neptune to a man, Scarboro has three fine golfers in Tommie Quinn, Ralph Code and Harold McGrail, and Bill Murphy is the boast of Salem.

The Wollaston course is burnt to a crisp. With the exception of the fifth fairway, there is little or no green grass on the entire course. The members have been playing preferred lies for weeks, but President William J. Fallon sanctioned the juniors playing them as they lie or teeing up, whichever the M. G. A. thought best.

If preferred lies are allowed, the ruling will doubtless develop many controversies over players taking selected, instead of preferred lies.

Regardless of the condition of a course, in a championship the contestants should play them as they lie. There will be enough stuff going on today without watching to see if a player moves his ball out of line of a tree or trap.

In fairness to the field as a whole, there should be scorers with all threesomes during the qualifying round.

POWER IN THE POOL

Not since Johnny Weissmuller have swimming fans seen anything like Eskil Lundahl's terrific speed in the water. He's the co-star of Sweden's two-man swimming team and is considered a certain Olympic winner in his specialty, 100-meter backstroke.

HILDA BOEHM REMAINS IN TOURNEY

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Covering a tennis tournament is regarded as a very rugged assignment by most sports chroniclers, but reporting one in which the Boehms twins, Hilda and Helen, are competing, is still more difficult.

From the spectators' point of view a tournament is a dizzy enough whirl of tennis balls and racquets and the Boehm twins, alike as Mike and Ike, add much to the usual confusion.

But the tournament now taking place at the Cohasset Golf Club has been greatly simplified by the defeat of Helen Boehm.

Hilda remains. But Hilda without Helen is like Thurston without his mysticism. Things are simplified for the spectator.

Hilda is in the quarterfinals today with Mrs. Seth T. Crawford, Mrs. Philip Theopold, Mrs. J. F. Bremer, Mrs. Robert Morris, and Mrs. Walter Weld. Two others will reach the quarter-final bracket this morning.

Hilda is unseeded, but still is considered as a possible winner of the South Shore championship. She now holds the North Shore title. If she cleans up at Cohasset it will sure be a great accomplishment.

Indians in New Park Sunday

Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis deciding whether the governor's throw was a ball or a strike.

President William Harridge of the American League doing a short act of umpiring at first base, and President John A. Heydler of the National League doing an equally short umpiring act at third.

Probably never before in Cleveland baseball history has a regularly scheduled game attracted such interest. Railroads have arranged special trains and excursion rates to bring in fans from all parts of northern Ohio. The advance sale of tickets has gone close to $20,000 already, and an attendance of 60,000 has been predicted by Alva Bradley, the Indian's president.

CUBS IN TWIN BILL TODAY WITH TRIBE

By JOE MOONEY

Faced with a hitting slump which threatens to send them into fourth place for the first time this season, the Braves stage a double assault on the Cubs at the tepee today.

It is no easy assignment for the Tribe. Socks Seibold and Bobby Brown slated to do the mound work in the first and second games, approach the business in hand with some misgiving.

After the way in which the Cubs belted Ed Brandt, McKechnie's best pitcher in the first game of the series, it would seem that all the talk about Chicago being a weak visiting team was so much propaganda.

For Roger's representatives, Bobby Smith and either Guy Bush or the so-called rookie southpaw, Lyle Tinsley, will receive the chucking assignment in the double bill.

The situation at the Tepee is rapidly approaching a crisis in which McKechnie will have to read the riot act to his players.

All talk of the Braves climbing into second place must be postponed for some time, apparently. If the Tribe takes both ends of today's offering, they will then have a chance to climb over the Chicago hurdle tomorrow and Friday.

A more sobering thought than this, however, is that the Phillies can move into our Braves' spot by winning today unless McKechnie's boys take at least one victory from the Cubs.

The Phillies had no difficulty banging the Reds into submission, 10-5, yesterday, and that will give you some idea what their chances of winning again today.

The first tilt of the current series with the Cubs was anything but auspicious for our Braves. Ed

JOHNNY WELCH HERO OF SOX VICTORY

Chicago, July 27—Johnny Welch, former Cubs pitcher, today is the hero of the Red Sox, for he pitched them to a 6-1 win over the Chisox here, and banged out a double and two singles in the process.

Welch was making his initial start for the Boston clan, and his flinging was great. His performance injected a new note of hope into the Sox spirits, and they will try to grab another here this p. m.

The Red Sox got started in the third and produced two runs. Welch started with a single to right.

TIME TRIALS AT READVILLE

The 31 auto race track stars who have entered the 50-mile race, which will be held at the Readville Speedway on Saturday afternoon, will engage in special trials tomorrow and Friday to see who will face the gun in the final.

The track will be ready for racing tomorrow. The management has expended $50,000 in making the track one of the fastest in the country. The banks have been built up so that it will be possible for the drivers to whirl around them at 90 miles an hour.

The track has also been heavily oiled to keep the dust down.

Wild Bill Cummings has been made a favorite in the 50-mile race. It is expected Stubby Stubblefield will give him the keenest competition. These stars recently met in a race at Syracuse. They were in a close battle for first place up to the time Stubblefield encountered motor trouble.

House of David Nine Meets Tribesmen at Tepee Monday

The House of David baseball team play the Braves Monday night at Braves Field. The game is scheduled to begin between 8:30 o'clock and 9, and will be played under flood lights. It will be the first night game played in a Boston big league park.

So far this season the Davids have defeated seven minor league clubs, including Rochester, Chattanooga, Hartford, Mobile, Macon, Jackson, Miss., and Hazelton, Pa.

SOLONS TO TILT ON DIAMOND

Greater Boston politicians will have their chances of getting even with one another when they clash on the diamond at Highland Park Sunday in one of the feature events of the outing of the St. Margaret's Ushers' Club.

Charles C. Cassidy, president of the club has arranged a varied program with a tug-of-war between the Ward 17 Democratic Club and the Old Timers' Club of Andrew sq., and St. Margaret's Ushers' Club.

Gen. Edward L. Logan has donated a prize cup to be awarded the winner of the grunt and groan pull. Dr. Joseph V. Lyons and "Bill" Prendible will umpire in the ball game.

Jack McCarthy Lost to Ring Wars for Two Months

During a mixup in the third round, McCarthy had his left shoulder dislocated. Jack wanted to keep on fighting, but the referee wisely thought otherwise.

GERMAN SPRINTERS MENACE, SAYS ROBERTSON

FOREIGN 800 ENTRANTS ARE GREAT

By LAWSON ROBERTSON
Chief Coach American Olympic Team

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Los Angeles, Cal., July 27—The question often is fired at me: "Who will furnish the stiffest opposition to the Americans in the Olympic track and field events?" I cannot make answer upon actual knowledge of most of the men that will be in action, but upon what I have read about such.

In the 100 and the 200 meters I think our chief menace is Arthur Jonath, of Germany. He has stepped the 100 in 10.3, which equals Eddie Tolan's mark. Another threat is Kornig, of Germany, who has run even faster, 10.2. But German experts regard him as not so consistently good as Jonath.

Jonath and Borchmeyer, of Germany, who ran in 21.4, will furnish us plenty of competition in the 200.

Golding of Australia, with a mark of 48 and an unbeaten record; Rampling, of England; Stoneley, the "mystery man of England," and Meitner, of Germany, are our chief rivals in the 400.

HAMPSON 800 STAR

Tom Hampson, of England is regarded by many as a "sure thing" in the 800; Martin, of Switzerland; Peltzer, of Germany, both of them veterans and Keller, of France, perhaps the best man in his country, will make it very difficult to crowd into the top-notch places in the 800.

Johansson, of Norway, has ran in 1:53 and deserves consideration.

We will find contention from many nations in the 1500 meters. Finland is liable to give us stiffest battle. They have Larva, winner of the 1928 event and Purje, who ran third. England has Thomas, with a mark of 3:54 and New Zealand has a speedster in Lovelock. Becalli, of Italy, is a great man at the distance, having done 3:52.2. Edwards of Canada, Keller of France, Peltzer, of Germany and Ny, of Sweden, also are dangerous.

In the 3000 meters steeplechase, it is Joe McCluskey of the U. S. A. against a band of great Finns. Loukkola is best and was the 1928 Olympic champion.

No chance for us in the 5000 meters or the 10,000 meters run and I cannot see us getting any important positions in the 50,000 meters walk. If Nurmi goes in the Marathon, he is likely to win. If not we must beat Paul Debruyn, of Germany.

110 HURDLES U. S.' PIE

The 110 meter hurdles is at our mercy—with nothing close. The 400 meters hurdle, however, is something different. The English have a great man in Lord Burghley, winner in 1928. This Golding, of Australia, is a 400 hurdler, as well as a flat man at that distance. Faccoli, of Italy, is rated as a great one over the 400 timbers.

The hammer throw title seems to belong to Dr. Pat O'Callaghan, of Ireland. He won it in 1928 and has improved greatly since then. It is difficult to find any one in his class. Whatever contention is offered may come from Skoib, of Sweden.

The javelin is something where we simply will not figure. Matti Jarvinen of Finland, who has thrown 248 feet, can toss farther without taking off his overcoat than any of our boys can do stripped down to intensive action.

The pole vault is ours—with no one close.

I think the same thing is true of the high jump. None of the Europeans has scaled heights which would make them seem able to press any of our best men.

The discus is a wide open contest. Frank Anderson of the U. S. A. is a star. Remecs of Hungary is another, Hirschfield of Germany, Douda, of Czecho-Slovakia, and Harry Hart of South Africa, also are good with the discus.

B. Haskell Sails Pokey to Victory

Marblehead, July 27—The seventh Beckmer-Brutal Beast race was held in a light breeze.

B. Haskell, in the Pokey, sailed a very good race and came in first in the second division, while F. W. Pierce, in the Dixit, was the winner in the second division.

DEUCE IS SADDLE ACE

When he's up there the dough goes down—he's that good. He's Silvio Coucci, only 17, and already considered the country's greatest jockey. He has won the American Derby and the Arlington Classic. With complete tack, as above, he weighs only 98 pounds. Coucci is pronounced "Coochie." And "Coochie" is never complete without "Hoochie." So racing fans call him "Hoochie Coochie."

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

RAY ALVIS AND some other folks got quite indignant when we wrote a story before the Young Jack Thompson-Lou Brouillard welterweight championship bout at the Boston Garden in which we stated that in order for Brouillard to get a crack at the title he was obliged to sign a contract to meet Jackie Fields if he won.

Everybody denied the yarn. The boys stuck to their guns even when Brouillard took a train ride to Chicago and went through with the Fields' bout. But the evidence is finally out in the sunshine. All because Brouillard has brought suit against Matchmaker Billy Ames of the Boston Gardens for $1500. Let Ames tell the story:

Mr. Boston

"When I signed Brouillard to meet Thompson at the Garden for the title," said Billy, "it was necessary for Lou to agree to meet Jackie Fields in the event he became champion. He posted a check for $2500 with Ray Alvis, manager of Thompson.

"Alvis cashed the check, and after the Chicago bout in which Brouillard dropped his title to Fields, Alvis gave Brouillard a check for $2500. This check was not paid immediately.

"When Fields came to Boston to box Johnny Indrisano, $1000 was paid off on the check. I then agreed to endorse the check to keep Alvis and Fields out of legal difficulties while in Boston.

"The Boston Garden has a contract for a Brouillard-Fields bout which didn't take place here. I believe that contract is worth at least $1500."

Now that the boys are airing their difficulties in court, they have furnished the necessary facts to prove we had the low-down on the Thompson-Brouillard-Fields deal.

THE BOXING COMMISSION blocked the Brouillard-Fields match here. It wasn't very hot for Fields on account of the fact he was tossed out of the ring in his tussle with Gorilla Jones. Otherwise the title bout would have been staged here rather than in Chicago. It only drew $25,000 in Chicago, while it would have dragged $50,000 into the box office here.

I BELIEVE THE promoters of the auto races at the Readville Speedway made a wise move when they banked the corners and oiled the track. This will eliminate the heavy clouds of dust which were so objectionable at the auto race meeting at Rockingham Park.

The owners of the Rockingham track refused to oil the track as they felt the oil would slow down the track for the Grand Circuit horse races which open there next Monday. The Readville promoters are not interested in other than auto races, and so will have their track in a condition which will permit the auto speed kings to cut loose.

I HAVE ALWAYS felt that banked corners are necessary for proper speed in auto races. When the corners are flat the drivers must slow down to prevent spills. With banked corners they usually step on the gas, hit the corners while going at full speed and then go winging down the stretches in record time.

Yacht Highlander Brings Back Trophy

Halifax, July 28 (AP)—W. R. Macaskill's yacht Highlander today brought the Prince of Wales trophy back to the Royal Nova Scotia yacht squadron for the first time in five years.

Highlander finished 57 seconds ahead of Cyclone, owned by J. W. Wells, summer resident of Chester, N. S.

FRENCH STAR IN ROLE OF REPORTER

New York, July 27 (AP)—Winging high over the midlands today is Jules Ladoumergue, the swiftest young man ever to run in the colors of France, bound for the Olympic games in Los Angeles as a newspaper reporter, hating the fact he won't be allowed to match his own speed against the fastest runners in the world.

He's only 25 now, at the absolute peak of his running powers, a little fellow, all legs and animation, a good looking, dapper youngster with a thin face, piercing black eyes and a shock of wavy black hair.

He got off the boat only yesterday to wait for the plane to carry him west, speaking not a word of English, attracting no attention, just a newspaperman going to work—this Frenchman who ran a mile within the year in the bewildering time of 4 minutes, 9 1-5 seconds.

He talked volubly, but with a flat kind of fatalism in his voice, of the edict of the French Amateur Athletic federation that branded him a professional last winter on charges of "having touched money."

"It is useless to deny the charges," he said. "They met, they decided, they announced, without once asking me a single question, without hearing me. It is hopeless to oppose them. It is all politics, bad politics."

TOO YOUNG IN 1928.

"I was too young to do anything in the 1928 games," he said. "But I looked forward, I practiced, I trained for this time, and here I am—with a typewriter."

He has few illusions as to the strength of the track and field candidates of France who preceded him here, such fellows as Paul Keller and Sera Martin apparently impressing him little. He does not think France will win any championships.

The 1500-meter title, he thinks rests between the Italian Beccali and the Finn Purje.

Nor does his own world records of three-quarters of amile in 3 minutes 6-10 seconds, and the 1000 meters in 2:23 3-5 seem to flood him with any idea that Olympic championships would have been at his mercy if he had been able to compete.

WILL NEVER TURN PRO

"I was lucky," he said with a laugh and a deprecating wave of his hands. "I was a runner of France, where good men are developed every 10 years. Fortunate was I that I was not born in America, where every year are developed great runners. Never would I have held a championship here. You have too many good men, too many great runners."

Very definitely Ladoumergue exploded any idea that he might be here to run as a professional, even to engage the great Paavo Nurmi in a match series after the Olympics, if the ban on the Finn were upheld in the final conclaves of the International Athletic Federation on the eve of the Olympics.

MOUND ACE SPHINX

Lon Warnecke, Cubs ace right handed rookie pitcher, lets his mound performance talk for him. He's a Sphinx as far as conversation in concerned. But his mates don't mind as long as he tosses the pill past the enemy.

Cubs' Hurling Ace Is Silent as Sphinx

By RILEY GRANNAN

If you're looking for information about Lonnie Warnecke, 23-year-old chief hero of Mt. Ida, Ark., and the pitching sensation of the National League in this year of grace, the last person you should seek is Lonnie Warnecke himself.

Silent? The Duxbury clams are a-Graham McNamees compared to this lean and swarthy southerner. He must have learned to say "I don't know" about the time he saw his first baseball, some years back.

It's one for the books. Here is Mr. Warnecke with a pitching record as long as your arm, and achieved in one season. He is heir apparent to being the leading pitcher in the national league, with 15 victories and three losses for a percentage of .824.

A year ago, Warnecke amassed the staggering total of two wins for a year's work. He has as much to say now as he had then, which is nothing at all. It's amazing how modest the boy can be.

LONNIE NO CHATTERBOX

If you tried to put the interview we had with young Lonnie into dialogue, it would sound like a cross examination of some one looking right at the electric chair.

Warnecke has three stock replies, which he uses with great change of pace—"I don't know," "I don't remember," and "You'll have to ask one of the older players."

What is Lonnie's best ball? You can search Lonnie. Curves, drops and a fire ball that is good for three alarms any time—it's all the same with Warnecke.

SKILL "JUST GREW"

Warnecke never understudied any of the big league pitchers in particular. He got his first mound lesson out of a thumb worn sport catalogue, and his skill, Like Topsy, just grew from that humble beginning.

The more we tried to pump some of the more orthodox answers out of Warnecke, the more we were convinced the interview was just a strange interlude with a stone wall.

Just because he has won 15 to date, Warnecke sees no reason to predict how many more ball games he will win. He has no goal such as 25 games for this year. He'll win all he can, if Mr. Hornsby will let him pitch.

"I just go along," says Warnecke, unbending for one wild moment of unrestrained speech, "I just go along pitching as well as I can."

But as for talking of personalities of the game, of clubs, and chances, of hopes and ambitions, of fears and foibles on the mound, Warnecke begs to be excused.

Brandt going down under a barrage of hits was a sight no fond admirer of the locals will care to see again in a hurry.

In face of this, is was cheering to see Wally Berger thump one of the longest drives in many moons over the left field fence in the fourth inning. The horsehide landed on the railroad tracks on the first bounce.

From then until the last of the ninth the Braves were scoreless, when Shires fooled the populace by banging his first single in weeks. He reached and stole third to come home for the second and last tally for Boston on Hargrave's single.

Bruce Cunningham, who relieved the tottering Brandt after seven innings, gave only three hits, but the least of these was good for two bases.

So What?

By JOE MOONEY

The House of David will meet the Braves in a night game, August 1, hair.

Some of the boys have been with the team 13 years. They're waiting for the barbers to take another 10 per cent cut.

As a sideline, the Davids offer one of the best juggling acts in baseball. The way the pennant race is now, McKechnie could show them some tight-rope walking himself.

All the Davids play heads-up baseball, if only to keep from tripping over their own whiskers.

The record of the club to date shows seven wins over minor league teams. All by close shaves.

Grover Cleveland Alexander will be on the mound against the Braves. He couldn't grow a beard in time for the game, so they fixed him up with part of a hair mattress.

King Ben Purnell founded the House of David dynasty, and a cousin, Dave Harrison, who plays left field for the House, is heir-apparent to the throne.

PIAZZA LOSES RING TITLE CHANCE

Conway's 1932 record:

W	L	P. C.
50	9	.847

By JACK CONWAY

Leo Larivee's furious rally in the eleventh and twelfth rounds enabled him to retain his New England middleweight championship in his 12-round bout with Odonne Piazza of the North End at an Argonne A. A. show at Fenway Park.

Piazza had the title in his vest pocket going into the eleventh heat. It looked as though he was going to be able to make good his promise to send the championship belt to Mussolini.

Then Piazza blew wide open. He slowed down to a walk, and was belted all over the ring by Larivee. The latter sent terrific right-hand punches to the body, and when the openings presented themselves, lifted his attack to the head.

The last two heats were healthy rounds for Larivee.

The decision of Referee Johnny Martin and Judges Francis Bowman and Tom Grady was unanimous.

Joe Venuti of the North End was awarded the decision over Dick (Twin) Lopes of Watertown in the opening four rounder.

Kid Cocoa, a dusky youngster from Palm Beach, Fla., proved a little bit too smart for Pete Herman of Roxbury and received the unanimous award at the conclusion of the second four rounder.

Phil Wagerman, former intercollegiate light heavyweight champion while a student at New Hampshire State College, punched out a well earned award over Eddie Jessup of Torrington, Ct., in a four-rounder that was filled with fireworks.

Chief Fait Elkins, former Indian football star who is now living in East Boston, evened accounts with Organ Record of Charlestown when he gained the decision over the Bunker Hill battler in another four rounder.

Tony Travers of New Haven was awarded the verdict over Eino Nyholm of Maynard in the eight-round semifinal.

THOMAS STOPS FALLING HAIR

Hair in your comb and brush means that your scalp is not physically able to withstand the ravishing attacks of the baldness producing germs. Unless you immediately rid your scalp of these causes of abnormal hair fall, you are bound to become bald.

Thomas treatment overcomes the causes of falling hair and gently stimulates the tiny glands, deep in the scalp, which cause hair to grow normally. When Thomas treatment starts, hair fall stops, dandruff ends and hair grows again as Nature intended it should grow. Thomas treatment is reliable, dignified and proved by more than 16 years of success. Carsons and Fore River in Cup Finals

The last game of the competitive soccer season will be played at Faxon Field, Quincy, on Sunday, where the Fore River and Quincy Carsons meet in the final of the State junior cup competition.

There may be a few exhibitions or charity contests played before the opening of the fall season in September, but Sunday's tilt is the final one where there is anything at stake.

Kenna Lands Job

Des Moines, Ia., July 27 (AP)—Eddie Kenna, veteran backstop of the Eastern League, was signed by the Des Moines club of the Western League today.

DILBOY BOUTS ON TONIGHT

Dilboy Post's ring tourney, at Dilboy Field, Somerville, has competition in the 147, 160, 175 pounds and heavyweights, tonight.

The heavyweight and light heavyleis are featured. Stanley Pallius of Athol heads the heavyweight list. He will have to contend with Pete Ruskowski of Holy Cross and others.

SO. BOSTON NINE VISITS DORCHESTER

A semi-pro baseball "natural" is on tap tonight in the Boston Twilight League when the South Boston nine journeys to the Dorchester Town Field to tackle the Dorchester pennant-strugglers.

South Boston went to work and smacked the Colored Giants for failing to show up at their park a week ago when they had a big crowd ready to see the game. With that score settled Southie now wishes to balance the ledger with Dorchester.

St. Thomas, one game up in the series with Roslindale for the first half championship for the City League, starts its second half race tonight against the muchly improved Mulvey Club.

The Mulveys have signed up Ike Camp, former Braves pitcher, and he will be on the mound against St. Thomas and Normie Sims this evening at the Fens Stadium.

Roslindale, which tied St. Thomas for the first-half pennant, will entertain the Tigers.

St. Catherine's hopes to increase its lead in the second-half race against the Star of the Sea nine from East Boston.

Townsend Favored to Beat Benny Leonard

New York, July 27 (INS)—For the first time in his life Benny Leonard, former world's lightweight champion, will enter the ring on the long end of the wagering when he meets Billy Townsend of Vancouver in 10 rounds at the Queensboro Stadium tomorrow night. Townsend the sharpshooters have installed the latter an 8 to 5 choice, for they consider the Vancouver battler the most formidable opponent Leonard has been asked to meet.

A number of Massachusetts folk are down on the South West Miramichi throwing Silver Doctor and Black Dose and Jock Scott at those New Brunswick sea run salmon. Among them are Edward MacHugh, the Scotch baritone artist on WBZ, and George M. Wallace, of Brookline, his host. Mrs. Wallace and son, George W. Wallace, are also in the party.

Jack Russell writes from Ludlow:

"They have all been successful in landing their first Atlantic salmon and, as I pen this, both Mr. Wallace and Mr. MacHugh are trying to land a fish apiece from the pool in front of my base camp. They have been into their fish for some time but I can't make out any weight yet."

Frank J. Tay of West Stoughton never had any grievance against speedboats until last Sunday. Wish his son he went to the Cape to fish Buttermilk bay for striped bass. He had been fishing about 10 minutes when the speedboat races started nearby, and he might just as well have been at home with a line in the bathtub.

Early morning fishermen are getting the stripers there, he reports. He's headed for Orleans and one of those 50-footers through the surf next Sunday.

Colonel and Mrs. Frank Carey, Capt. E. H. Durell and Lew Tschirky are among anglers taking some of the big bronze smallmouths out of Three-Mile lake, China, Me.

Fish and Game

By WIN BROOKS

Fishermen are such adroit liars that it may be well to have the salt handy for this one which Charles "Eggie" Thurston, the Milton Izaak, is foistering on his friends. Here's the way it came to me without the bat of an eyelash:

"I was fishing a Capa pond Sunday for bass, using shiners. Never mind what pond; they come big there. I had about 70 feet of line out when a small bass took the shiner. He was about six inches long, only a little bigger than the shiner.

"He rolled up the water plenty though, and I had him about eight feet from the boat when along came a 2-pound pickerel and swallowed him. Well, sir, I horsed that pickerel for the boat when along came . . .

"A 12-pound muskie and swallowed the pickerel!" I suggested.

"No, no. Along came a warden and I got pinched for using a game fish for bait."

If angling needs any seasoning to make it more palatable (and for most of us it doesn't) it comes in the way of friendly competition among men fishing the same waters at the same time. It serves to keep us from growing pinguid with self-satisfaction, at any rate, and sometimes it has surprising results. As an illustration:

F. H. Billard and C. R. Gardinor, both of Meriden, Ct., just finished a bit of rivalry on the Metabetchouan river, Quebec. Billard, on the first day, brought to net a 22-inch square-tail trout, a magnificent specimen.

Gardinor went after that record so hard he nearly threw his arm out. And he beat it with a redspot that measured a half inch less than two feet. Both trout are entered in the contest which James L. Clark, vice-director of the American Museum of Natural History, is conducting for the most beautiful specimen (not the largest).

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

I play bridge at parties with some who don't care,
While others, though willing, don't set anywhere.
But one type of player who gets in my hair
Is the cheapest of cheaters who will not play fair!

They work and give signals for a cheap set of bowls.
I guess they're just crooked and cannot play fair,
They probably cheat when they play solitaire!

When my cards run poorly I don't always smile,
It's human to want to win, once in a while!
If I'm having bad breaks my luck I might "damn,"
But I won't play them crooked—
No! Not for a slam!

—MARG.

Mary Plans "Secrets" Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, July 27—The hurried dash made by Mary Pickford in a fast-moving plane to New York was not a futile adventure. True, she didn't succeed in buying the screen rights to "Another Language," but she did make up her mind about her next two pictures.

As soon as she finishes the Frances Marion story she will begin work on "Secrets," the stage play which Norma Talmadge made in the silent version and which Mary herself worked on for many months two years ago. "Secrets" was eventually discarded but it will be brought back now with Frances Marion writing the scenario and Frank Borzage directing. These two will be associated in both her screen plays. Agnes Christine Johnstone selected by Frances Marion is working on the adaptation of "Happy Ending."

Cohan in Role

Did some one say George M. Cohan was pining so for Broadway that he was going to leave the movies flat and return? You can hear a lot of things in this town of Hollywood if you just put your ear to the ground. George M. Cohan may have thought he was going to take himself to the big town, but Paramount has another idea. They have purchased the screen rights to "Song and Dance Man," his own play. Seems to me I remember the picture was made in the silent version, but they didn't have George M. Cohan there to play the part he created on the stage. He is going to bring it to the screen with Wynne Gibson opposite him. It's now being adapted by Francis Martin.

Hollywood Chatter

This the rumoringest town in the world. Once a story gets started there is no denying it even when it isn't true. This tale has been peddled all over the village that Norma Shearer is expecting to retire from the screen after "Strangers All." That "it" to await another visit from the stork. Both Norma and her husband, Irving Thalberg, say there is absolutely no truth in the story. "Why," asks Irving, "should we deny such a story if it were true? We would be delighted to have another baby but it just isn't so, and I think Norma and I would be the first to know." So let's forget this one even if it has been chattered over the radio and in print.

Hawks for Films

Capt. Frank Hawks is going to become a movie star. Maybe he felt after his recent crash, when he so nearly lost his life, that it might be a little safer to face the camera than to face death as often as he has in the past. It was Jack Sherrill who persuaded the brave captain to join up with the movies. His first picture will be "Klondike," a Trem Carr production. I was trying to persuade Capt. Jimmie Doolittle to go into the movies when he was here a few weeks ago, for Jimie has the looks, and what that boy doesn't know about aviation has not yet been written.

Chance for Sari

I have been hoping that something would be done to give Sari Maritza a chance on the screen. That picture she did "Forgotten Commandments" wouldn't have helped Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, Marion Davies or any one of the headliners. Poor Sari Maritza was just the victim of circumstances. Paramount is going to remake "Hula," Clara Bow's story with Sari Maritza in mind. E. D. Larshin and Harvey Ferguson are writing this glamorous tale of Hawaii.

Snapshots of Hollywood

CAROLE LOMBARD in better health than she has been in many months, looking lovely in a pink chiffon frock. She and WILLIAM POWELL signed many hundreds of autographs for the college lads of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity at the Ambassador Hotel. CLARK GABLE a little surprised when he saw napkins from the Coconut Grove taken being used to get his autograph. He must have signed a few thousand himself. The lad from all over the country did a Marathon when they saw DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS and HAROLD LLOYD. JOAN BENNETT, BEBE DANIELS and KAY FRANCIS getting many compliments and invitations to dance from the boys who hailed from every state in the Union. BEN LYON, GARY COOPER, JOEL McCREA singled out by the girls who were with the fraternity boys for autographs. LUCILE and JAMES GLEASON chaperoned pretty MARY CARLISLE. GEORGE RAFT with MARY DUNCAN at the Frolics. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

SNAPPY REVUE IS GOING OVER BIG AT THE SCOLLAY

With a cast of 60 and five top-top stars, Manager Ellsworth Vinson is giving Scollay patrons this week a snappy revue of Atlantic City life. There's variety and balance in the offering with plenty of singing and dancing. Grace Worth, Cliff Nazarro, Franks and Irving Co. and the Page Boys Co. are among the stars.

Screen Veteran Was One of Last to Appear at Old Boston Museum

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Dollars to doughnuts, the modern generation wouldn't know what a Nantucket sleighride was! Or, understand, "Thar she lobtails—thar she white-waters!" Or see immediately our meaning if we say we had "gammed" with a genius of the movies, an outstanding Hollywood character. Therefore, an explanation is in order—a "gam" was the New England whalingman's term for a chat, a sort of interview, and we have just had our "gam" with Hobart Bosworth, one of the few survivors of the old hand harpoon days of whaling.

Hobart Bosworth a "blubber hunter" veteran! Yes, and how! It comes out during our talk backstage at RKO Keith's, where he is giving rich entertainment in an act that is inspiringly sincere and interesting. Bosworth is the most colorful personality we ever met. His middle name should be adventure. Running away from home at the age of 12, the boy sailed the seven seas for years. He sailed and he whaled, and spent 11 months in Arctic waters. After that came years knocking about the waterfront, boxing, adventuring here and there, before he settled down to the stage.

"Come back to roost!"

He smiles as he tells us that story. We learn this is like home territory to him.

"I turn in to the Parker House," he says, "I note a tablet stating that Zaccheus Bosworth owned the land whereon the hotel stands. Zaccheus flourished 300 years ago. And it struck me as strange that I, a descendant, should be staying in a building over the site of his old home of 1632. So I wrote down at the hotel, 'Come Back to Roost!'"

Bosworth informs us his brother was Wells Bosworth, architect in Boston, who had a hand in the designing of the new Tech group. On his father's side he is a descendant of Myles Standish and of John and Priscilla Alden; he has the blood of nine Mayflower families in his veins. That's New England stock for you!

"I was one of the last to speak lines on the stage of the old Boston Museum," he said. "For 10 years, I used to play in Boston every year. Our last play in the Museum was 'Modern Magdalen.'

"After the last performance, knowing they were going to end the life of the famous old theater, I made a dive for the orchestra conductor's stand; I wanted it for a souvenir. But others beat me to it."

Bosworth is 65, but you'd never believe it; he is vigorous, and his face has a youthful look. He has but a portion of one lung; one is entirely gone. But you'd never believe that either, he looks so healthfully robust!

"Anyway," he is saying, "I sailed on the old New Bedford bark Mary and Ellen, built almost 100 years ago."

"Happen to know Hartson Rodfish, a Martha's Vineyard friend, and famous whaling skipper," we ask.

"And also George Fred Tilton, another Vineyarder, now caretaker of the old Morgan on the Cut. Greene estate at Dartmouth," he answers, 'I have plenty of relatives on Nantucket, too."

He entertains us with tales of his seafaring.

"I also sailed on the clipper ship Sovereign of the Seas," he adds.

There's romance in this man—as a matter of fact, few men combine all the elements of art and manhood and adventure that he does. He is sincere, startlingly frank and fearless, and one of the most witty and delightful of story-tellers.

Of Louella Parsons he speaks much. He thinks she is a wonder among women.

"A longtime friend, a true friend always," he declares. "We'd be lost without her over uma to give us all the news. And that woman has character as well as great ability."

Of the movie actors, Bosworth speaks warmly, heartily. Of Conrad Nagel he talks at length.

"He is a close neighbor of mine, and we love him," he states. "He is not only a superb actor, but he gives unstintingly of his time, to aid his fellows in the profession, and his art, and the industry. He is one of the ablest men I know."

Mrs. Bosworth is her husband's strong right arm; she is a helpmeet in a 100 per cent sort of a way. She buries herself in his work and his happiness. We know his heart is speaking when he says:

"I couldn't get along without her."

Met Changes

The Metropolitan changes its program tomorrow. On stage will be "Rio Rita," the musical extravaganza, heralded as one of the Met's best stage presentations; and on screen will be Janet Gaynor and Charlie Farrell in "First Year."

There is a cast of 62 in "Rio Rita," with six elaborate sets. Allen Waterous, star of light opera and musical comedy, and Kitty Carlisle, famous actress singer, head the cast.

'Peep Show' by Theater Unit

By HARRIS MORGAN

For the first time on any stage, the Theater Unit produced "Peep Show," a new play by Elsie Schauffler, at West Falmouth.

The Rialto has it that "Peep Show" will be staged on Broadway next fall by Arthur Beckhard, who supervised the Theater Unit production. First question of this reviewer is whether Mr. Beckhard has another "Another Language." The answer is almost yes.

Any production of "Peep Show" would do well to include several members of the Theater Unit acting company, especially Estelajane Windust as Andrew, Katherine Squire as Penelope and Myron McCormick. And the New York producer might well recognize the talents of Norris Houghton, who designed the sets at West Falmouth.

Globe Trotter

A Zeppelin over London, the very idea of which once struck terror to the hearts of Britishers is shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. It is, of course, only a friendly visit of Dr. Hugo Eckener in his great Graf Zeppelin, and on this particular trip the Hearst Metrotone News cameraman photographs all the interesting points of the English metropolis. The final scenes show willing hands helping the big ship land on English soil. There is an interesting description of the trip by Tae Globe Trotter, now at Loew's State.

Five dry leaders from various parts of the country hold a powwow in Washington and air their opinions of the wets. Among those seen and heard are Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Dr. Robert Watson of Boston; S. Earl Taylor of Los Angeles, Dr. R. P. Hutton of Rhode Island, and Dr. F. Scott McBride. Both Republican and Democratic views came in for a verbal lambasting on their resubmission and repeal planks. Apparently they are not a bit downhearted and they give the wets something to think about and—perhaps a laugh or two.

Gen. von Mackensen, the Kaiser's field marshal, comes out of retirement in Hanover, Germany, to greet the Black Hussars whom he formerly commanded.

"Unashamed" for Orpheum

Opening next Friday on the screen at Loew's Orpheum is Helen Twelvetrees in "Unashamed," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of an original story by Bayard Veiller, noted playwright. Miss Twelvetrees plays the heroine whose indiscretions force her to face the choice of sacrificing her honor or dooming her brother at the hands of the executioner. Robert Young plays the brother, and the cast also includes Lewis Stone, Jean Hersholt, John Miljan, Monroe Owsley and Robert Warwick.

The diminutive comedian, Jos Phillips, will headline the vaudeville bill. Others on the bill will include the Novelle Brothers, sutertainers of royalty.

Real Life Role

Father David Daze, member of the faculty of Loyola University, California, was induced to play on the screen his real life role of a priest in a wedding scene for "Pack Up Your Troubles," Laurel and Hardy feature comedy.

DIVES FLOURISH NEAR POLICE STATION

By THE MASKED REPORTER

Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.

The town of Hull, in which Nantasket lies, is a Sahara, surrounded by moist regions.

The desert is the strip of territory controlled by the metropolitan district commission, where there is not a booze joint, a beer parlor, or even a slot machine.

The Masked Reporter

On one side is the ocean of salt water. On the other sides are the steak-and-beer palaces and mile beer gardens and kitchen barrooms.

And the well-to-do part of the whole moist area is around the Paragon station with a radius of less than 300 yards, any body with the inclination can get good and "tied on" without having more than one drink in each place.

Of course, since the big scare of last week-end when the word went around among the line-up centers that the Feders were going to raid again soon protection or no protection, friendships or no friendships -- things have undergone a temporary change.

But normally, Atlantic ave. and Nantasket ave. in that southern end of Hull, are as moist as any two thoroughfares in the land.

CLUSTER 'ROUND CHURCH

Strange as it may seem, they cluster around the police station, almost like chicks around their mother. They nearly engulf a church and schoolhouse. And this is only one small section of the town.

North of it, beginning about at the point where the traffic officer stands at the foot of Green Hill, at the junction of the road leading down from the police station is the arid section. This extends northward to the junction of the new Washington boulevard.

Not even a slot machine there, although those gambling devices are numerous in other parts of the Hull territory, enjoying as much protection as the liquor trade.

Throughout the other parts of the town, the liquor trade flourishes and is no respecter of property.

There are stores where beer can be ordered and delivered with the groceries.

Garages where anybody can drive in, order a pint, and see it produced from a trap-door in the floor. One garage is used for storage of beer and booze, and not far away is another structure used for the same purpose, with nothing in a business way to disguise its purpose.

The most profitable joints have their specialties. There are the beer gardens. Several have put up a nifty gin rickey. Gambling is the specialty of one huge place where many cars can be seen parked nightly, the visitors enjoying steaks or lobster dinners the uninitiated might think. There is one notorious narcotics joint sing its liquor trade as a screen for this nefarious racket.

Some of the places are run by women--queens of the rum business--who have garnered small fortunes in the trade.

The beer and booze dispensed is far from being the "Canadian stuff" that the "bootles" claim. Most of the whisky comes from a plant near Bridgewater. Most of the beer from Brockton, Everett and a Rhode Island spot between Pawtucket and Central Falls.

CHEAP LIQUOR SOLD

The prices at most of the joints are not bargain prices. For 50 cents for a bottle holding little more than a glass, a lot of it horse brew, at that.

So-called "Canadian ale" is $2 a quart. Alleged Scotch and rye sell for $3.50 to $4 a pint. Gin, $2 a pint. A "shot" of whisky costs 75 cents; a gin rickey, 60 cents. And the glasses have thick bottoms. The Scotch and rye is "cut way down."

What with business as it is, and prices standardized at a high level by the boys who control the booze racket at Nantasket, several speakeasy proprietors, forced to close up their places in Hull this year, boldly established themselves in another town to angle a bit recklessly for the automobile trade.

'BABES' OF BRITISH TEAM

SOVIET FARMS SALES CURB OFF

Moscow, July 27 (AP)—Soviet authorities today announced a new important step toward removing official restrictions against sales by Russian peasants of their own products.

All Russian peasants living within 30 miles of Moscow are now freed from contracts which heretofore obligated them to deliver their produce to state co-operative organizations at fixed prices.

An exception is made regarding grain, however and the grain contracts will remain in operation.

The peasants may sell all other products, such as milk, eggs, fruit and vegetables, without price restrictions, either to co-operatives or to private consumers.

The only reservation is that these peasants who have not joined the collective farms must carry out 50 per cent of their contracts for potato deliveries.

Farm Board Probe Starts Tomorrow

Washington July 27 (AP)—Chairman McNary of the Senate agriculture committee after a conference at the White House today said he had informed President Hoover the investigation of the Farm Board would begin either today or tomorrow.

OPTIMISM AT SHRINE MEET

San Francisco, July 27 (AP)—The Shrine's pageantry of "National Optimism" swept today toward a second day climax which will weld merriment and business in a "Mardi Gras of Industry."

In the Mardi Gras tonight industries and civic life of San Francisco will be depicted for the nobles of the Mystic Shrine in grotesque and educational floats and figures.

While the majority of the 250,000 visitors to the convention are devoting themselves to the practice of optimism, the imperial council will meet behind closed doors to conduct the more serious business of the three-day convention.

Earl C. Mills of Des Moines, Ia., in accordance with custom, is to be selected for elevation from deputy imperial potentate to imperial potentate, succeeding Thomas J. Houston of Chicago.

Aaron Fox Yields in Child Abandoning

Pratt's Blast Against Saugus Assessors Is Back Unread

A scathing criticism of Saugus assessors which was sent by registered mail a week ago to Chairman Lewis J. Austin by Rep. C. F. Nelson Pratt was delivered today to Rep. C. F. Nelson Pratt.

Just after it had been mailed, Austin stepped out as chairman and John J. Mullen became head of the board.

When Austin received the letter addressed to him as "Chairman of Assessors," he looked at the return address on the envelope also and he told the letter carrier:

"Not me. I'm not chairman any more. It goes to Mullen. I can't sign for it."

So it was taken to Mullen and Mullen said:

"Not me. I'm not Lewis J. Austin. I won't sign for it. It should go to him."

So it was taken back to Austin, still unopened, and Austin again refused. "Not I," said the little red hen.

There was only one place then that it could be delivered and Rep. Pratt today got back his week-old criticism, which nobody but himself had read. He accuses the assessors of favoritism in the matter of abatements.

BETTER TIMES ARE REPORTED EVERYWHERE

New York, July 27 (US)—Facts and figures from all over the country bolstered up the national business morale today, with widespread evidence of a revival of industry.

Five thousand men were back at work in the RCA-Victor plants at Camden, N. J., today, after prolonged periods of unemployment. Corporation heads reported that the men will be kept at work through August and that "even better conditions are expected in the fall."

At the plant of the Campbell Soup Company, also in Camden, it was announced that 4000 men and women will return to work next Monday.

Throughout New England came reports of factories opening their doors after long periods of idleness, with a total of 20,000 recently unemployed men and women back at work in the last few weeks.

Five hundred looms hummed again at Governordale Mills, Conn., and company officials said a night shift would be called in soon.

More news of returning prosperity came from various points in New England.

600 MORE RETURN

Six hundred employes of a Gardner stove company went back to work.

Three hundred workers at a Fall River textile mill have returned to work, after seven weeks of idleness.

Eventual employment of 150 men was promised by the projected reopening of a mica and feldspar quarry near Danbury, Ct.

Silk and woolen mills in Massachusetts and Rhode Island are running at near capacity, with one mill reporting an increase of more than 100 per cent in its workers since July 1.

The upswing of New England business and resultant employment also showed.

Raw materials for New England industries arrived in large volume at the Port of Boston since beginning of week. Collector of Customs W. W. Lufkin reported $465,765 as the value of Monday's imports, which brought materials and foodstuffs from all parts of the world.

BIG ROAD PROGRAM

Announcement of acceptance of bids by the department of public works for three huge pieces of road construction and word from Washington announcing the Treasury Department will go ahead with plans for public buildings, which included 30 in Massachusetts, showed that hundreds would be back in the employment circle within a period of several months. Other New England developments were:

At Rochester, N. H.—Establishment of a night shift employing 200 at the Gonic Manufacturing Company. The day shift employs 500. Sufficient orders to operate at a night and day capacity for months.

Preparations being made to reopen the Rochester mill of the Woodonic Worsted Company.

SHOE WORKERS WANTED

At Lawrence—Shoe manufacturers finding difficulty to obtain experienced shoe workers. Demand for fancy stitchers, vampers, cloth cutters, machine and hand operators and pressers.

Improvements in seven important economic fields were noted by the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce in its June survey of the state's 16 largest cities.

Increases were shown in postal receipts, bank debits, electricity consumption, bales of cotton consumed, number and value of automobiles sold and life insurance sales. Number and gross liabilities of bankruptcies decreased.

Youngstown, O., July 27 (AP)—Four sheet mills of the Republic Steel Corporation began operating at Warren, O., today, affording work for more than 100 men.

The plant has been operating 13 mills since Saturday, making tin plate for the autumn canning season.

THIS IS LIFE

RUSSIA'S NEWEST MOVE MAKES US GIVE HEED TO OUR OWN COUNTRY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

PROF. ROGERS

THE NEWS FROM RUSSIA THAT henceforth groups of artisans are to be allowed to conduct business on a capitalistic basis, taking private profits, not merely with the consent but with the active encouragement of the Soviet government, is another argument for those of us who believe that eventually the Russian system will be found to approximate something not so very unlike of our own.

Already it has been made perfectly clear to us that communism in the strict sense of the word no longer exists over there. What the Russian people are living under is a rigorous system of state capitalism, in which the state furnishes the capital, employs the labor and takes the profits, a very different thing from Lenin's original plan.

The latest ruling may be the opening wedge of a system not unlike that of the western world in general. The theoretical communists, of whom we have so many over here, will probably attempt to point out that this is only a temporary expedient which does not really affect the principle. The theoretical anti-communists, who are more numerous if not more vociferous, will trot out the old adage that you can't change human nature and let it go at that.

No one with a historical sense believes that you can't change human nature. It would rather be safer to say that human nature is infinitely plastic, infinitely susceptible to suggestion and propaganda, and even, though more slowly, susceptible to experience. There are a great many basic beliefs in which human nature has changed its mind, adopted a new point of view so deeply founded as to appear instinctive.

Weary, Since the War, of Legislation

I doubt if anybody could be found today seriously to defend slavery. That is a very great change in human nature, since it was not so long ago that the mass of the public took it for granted. There is no doubt that a similar change is taking place in regard to the necessity or inevitability of war. Particularly among the educated young people war is coming to be regarded as slavery used to be.

The younger generation, too, is highly dubious about enforced righteousness by legislation. At the end of the last century and the beginning of this, the intellectual world was committed to the idea of the amelioration of human conditions by legislation. The most vocal of the fugel-men was Bernard Shaw, who said once that the only way to make people decent is by act of Parliament.

H. G. Wells, too, pinned his faith on social pressure. What he called "the open conspiracy" was nothing more or less than the organization of instructed and social minded people to force the rest of the world to be decent by legislative and social pressure. But of late Mr. Wells has seemed rather low in his mind about this possibility and the conclusion of Shaw's last play, "Too True to Be Good," is little more than a counsel of despair.

Generally speaking the generation that has grown up since the war is weary of legislation. That in itself is a change of belief, not so much a change in human nature, perhaps, as a return to an earlier attitude. But the reported enthusiasm of the younger Russians for the present regime, the kind of self-sacrificing idealistic religious enthusiasm which is willing to deny self for the common good, would seem to exhibit that kind which the skeptic deems impossible.

Working Back to Private Capitalism

And yet, in the face of all that enthusiasm, the Soviet government would seem to be working slowly and astutely back toward private capitalism. What is the explanation? The easiest way out is to say that you can change human nature pretty thoroughly, in its enthusiasm and ideals, but you can't change the facts which in the long run affect human nature.

When Franklin Roosevelt implied recently that economic facts do not matter so much as human management of those facts —he said something that was half true and half false. It is probably true that the human attitude can to a considerable degree control economic laws.

Man has lived with reasonable success under all sorts of economic systems. Slavery was reasonably successful as a system of political economy. So was Feudalism. So was Capitalism. And so appears to be the Soviet system. I said "reasonably" successful. No system has ever been more than that. No one except a pure one hundred per cent crank ever expects any system to be completely successful.

It is probably true that the present complex industrial age requires more governmental management, if it is to work well, than the simpler, less complex age that our fathers knew. The government will probably have to see to it more effectively that production is restricted, both agricultural and industrial, that labor, whether it be artisan or professional, will have to be distributed more intelligently over this great country of ours. The government cannot, from the very nature of government, guarantee a living for everybody.

Country as a Whole Is Changing

We are beginning to realize that the moment the pressure of earning a living is removed there are large numbers of people who will lie down on the government. The experience of the dole in England proves that. In this country no one of us but knows of people who refuse to work unless they can draw the inflated wages of five years ago.

They will pass up work because they find they can be taken care of without work. With money in the bank they will try to chisel their way into the public funds. Among such people there is an increasing belief that the world—which is to say the government—owes them a living, regardless of their own competence, ambition, ingenuity and honesty.

This feeling never existed in this country before, at least to any such extent. Human nature is being changed, during this depression, to an alarming extent.

It is perfectly possible that the country as a whole is insanibly changing, chameleonlike, to a mistaken and corrupted conception of what used to be miscalled "socialism." But that change in attitude is not changing the facts, which will after all decide whether our new conception of government can be successful or whether it will mean a new kind of dark ages of stagnation and anarchy.

The one cheerful sign on the horizon is the emergence of strongly organized associations of private citizens that are determined to fight the supine attitude of so many of our people. The National Economy League may not be able to affect the public office holder, but if its publicity is powerful enough it may help change the attitude of the average citizen, teach him to depend on himself more and on the government less.

The United States Society, with its project to supply honest and impartial political information to the schools may do something. The economic laws still hold good. What is needed is to bring plastic human nature back in accordance with them.

SOUTH END BOY GETS 6 MONTHS, BUT APPEALS

Married Romeo Takes Friend's Ring on Promise to Wed Her, Then Gives It to Another

The Romeo road became rocky today in municipal court for Bernard Robbins, 27, of Rutland sq., South End, and it may become even rockier through Robbins' admission that he is drawing $10 a week aid from the city welfare department.

Robbins was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction for thefts from two girls, with whom he admitted he was keeper company. He appealed and was held in $500.

OTHER VICTIMS

In addition with two victims of his love affairs uncovered, police believe that Robbins may have victimized other young women and an investigation of this angle was begun garried on Police say that Robbins, who is married and a native of Lubec Me., took a $125 diamond ring to be "repaired" from Miss Jennie Bouras, 23, of West Newton rd., South End, whom he had promised to marry.

BECAME ENGAGEMENT RING

He is alleged to have given the ring as an engagement ring to Mrs. Irene Welch, of Meridian st. East Boston. Mrs Welch, who is separated from her husband, told police at the time Robbins gave her the ring, he took a $50 gold watch and a $75 diamond ring. He has failed to return either, she said

Miss Bouras complained against him when he failed to return her ring. A warrant was secured yesterday and Robbins was taken into custody

BRUTAL POLICE BLAMED

EXCLUSIVE

POLICE ATTACK ON WOMAN CHARGED

Mattapan Mother of Four Alleges She Was Beaten in Search for Rum

Mrs. Abraham Franklin, mother of four children, charged today three plainclothesmen from Division 19 made a surprise raid on her home, 58 Hiawatha rd., Mattapan, last Saturday and that one of them assaulted her.

She said she was handled so roughly that she was forced to go to bed She is still being treated by Dr. Harry R. Levine, of 512 Blue Hill ave, she declared. She claimed to have been in delicate health when the policemen invaded her apartment

SOUGHT LIQUOR

The woman's husband, a fruit pedlar, complained to Supt. Crowley. He and his wife demand an investigation, and charge brutality against the police

"I had just finished my housework," said Mrs. Franklin today, "and was seated in my sun porch when I heard someone moving around in my apartment. Going into my living room I was confronted by three men, two of whom I recognized as police officers.

"They told me they had a warrant to search my rooms and cellar for liquor. They did and couldn't find any. They told me they had received complaints from a neighbor about men coming to my place for drink and that they had been here 10 times. I told them I had no liquor and didn't sell any and that no men were coming to my home.

ARM WRENCHED

"Sergt. Flaherty told me he had a search warrant, but Patrolman Jerry' Sheehan did most of the talking. Sheehan told me to be quiet and to sit down. I told him I had a right to move about in my own home.

"I said I wanted to speak to my daughter, Anna, 12, who was starting for Maine next day with a neighbor. I wanted to tell her what to take when Patrolman Sheehan clapped his hand over my mouth and shoved me against the wall. He wrenched my arm and held his hand so tightly over my mouth that he cut my lip and hurt me

"Then, finding no liquor, they went away, and every day since Saturday they have had a policecar at my door watching my house and discharging me before the neighbors. It is true that they complained of me before, but I have not had any liquor in my home for two years. That doesn't make any difference to them. I blame most of it on the gossip of the neighbor who told them men were coming to our flat. That was a lie. If the store men of gas man came that neighbor thought them customers.

DENY ACCUSATION

"I don't think I should be bothered in this way. I am not breaking the law and was scared the way they pounced in on me without warning Saturday.

"I have four children, David, 16, Anna, 12, Mildred, 11, and Shirley, seven. Officer Sheehan had no right to put his hands on me. I didn't scream until after he held my mouth. I don't know the name of the third policeman. My husband told Superintendent Crowley it was Sergt. Waugh but it wasn't. I demand satisfaction for such treatment."

The police denied that any of them handled Mrs. Franklin roughly They say they had warned her several times and that neighbors complained about activities in her apartment

DYNAN TANGLE STILL PUZZLES

The whereabouts of all three principals concerned in the mystery of the New York disappearance and reported kidnaping of Mrs. Margaret M. Dynan, 19, Salem bride, were unknown to police today.

Although her mother-in-law was reported to have said she was safe, Mrs. Dynan was not located in either Salem, Peabody, or Lynn.

Edward Dynan, her husband, who reported to Wilmington, Del., authorities that his bride vanished while they were honeymooning and that he feared she was kidnaped, was reported on his way home

His brother, Joseph Dynan, 40, alleged to have deserted his wife and three children a few days after Edward and Margaret were married, was reported seen in Lynn Monday night and was sought by Police today at a house near the Lynn-Peabody line, but he was not found.

There is a non-support warrant out for him and it is his whereabouts in which police are chiefly interested

Police Pay Final McCloskey Tribute

The police department paid a last tribute today to Lieut. Charles B. McCloskey of the Brighton station, who died Sunday at his home, 45 Ridgemont st., Brighton. Capt. Thomas S. J. Kavanagh led a detail of 24 men and a detail of 47 from the Brighton station was headed by Sergt. Walter Brown

Supt. Crowley and Judge Connolly were among those at the requiem mass in St. Columbkill's Church. Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery

Flora Says She Must Quit Her Husband

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

"Marry me before I go," Mark Marriman says to Sondra Kent as he prepares to go away for years of work in the Congo. Sondra is more ready to agree than she ever has been before. She has determined not to marry Mark, because of his poverty, since she has been trained to make a wealthy marriage. She even has asked John Anderson to give Mark the position, but now she dreads the separation. The nearness of Mark's departure leads them to tell each other of their mutual love, and she finally marries Mark. After the ship sails, John takes her to lunch. He goes abroad and returns suddenly.

NOW READ ON—

FLORA FLUNG her cigarette into the empty grate.

"I think he's a . . . worm," she said.

There was an eloquent silence

"Oh, I know he's kind—" Flora went on with a sort of weary resignation. "But kindness is revolting when it comes from the wrong person. I'd rather have my eyes blacked by a man I cared for, than a diamond necklace from . . . well, from Ben."

Sondra took up a brush and began mechanically to smooth her hair

"Well — and so — what?" she asked

Flora shrugged her slim shoulders

"One word led to another, of course, and In the end the storm turned. He accused me of not caring for him—which is true—and of caring for . . . for someone else . . . which is also true."

"Meaning Jocelyn Farr?" Sondra asked

"Yes. I've often wondered if you guessed. I care for him all right and he knows it, but it's no use: he's got puritanical ideas—your friend Mark Merriman reminds me of him a little." She broke off to ask for a moment, "Well, what do you think about it?"

MISTAKE TO QUARREL

"I think it's a mistake to have quarrelled with Ben if you can't have anything better," Sondra said slowly

Flora laughed bitterly. "You would! You're a thousand times more worldly than I ever had those sort of ideas too, once, but not now—" she started up and began pacing the room restlessly. "I tell you I can't stand it any longer. What do I get out of it? Clothes, and jewels, and boring dinner parties and masses of boring friends, and nothing better to look forward to—ever! I shall get old and fat, and Ben will get older and fatter, and then some day I shall die—never having known what it means to be happy, or to have done anything worth while. I can't go on with it, Sondra, I simply can't."

"What are you going to do then?"

"I'm going away. I told Ben so, and then, of course, he came round and begged and implored—" she gave a little shiver of distaste.

"And where are you going?"

"I don't know. I've got a little money put away—not a great deal, of course, but I've got to get out somewhere—where I can breathe, and belong to myself . . . I suppose you think I'm mad?"

Sondra shook her head

SWING IN A CAGE

"I shan't be any more sorry than I am now. It's like living in a cage to live in this house; a stifling cage. I'm still young, and I've got to be free, that's all I know."

Sondra stared at her sister. She had never believed Flora capable of so much feeling For some time she had guessed that Flora and Jocelyn Farr liked one another but then as Flora had just said—Jocelyn had puritanical ideas.

Yes, he was like Mark—Mark who had insisted that they get married

Flora went on half apologetically. "The only thing that worries me is—what will you do? You can't stay here with Ben, of course, even if he wanted you to, and he won't, you know that. I'm afraid it means cutting off your allowance—I shan't have any too much money of my own, and generosity was

COURT DENIES CONTEMPT PLEA

Justice Field in Supreme Court today dismissed a petition to find Herbert S. Mabey, securities broker and son of a Superior Court judge, in contempt.

The petition was brought by David J. Cohen, counsel for minority stockholders of the General Management Corp., of which Mabey, who is under indictment in both the Medford Trust and Industrial Bank & Trust cases is treasurer.

It was based on the inability of Gabriel Ranger, a public accountant, to obtain a statement of the financial condition of the corporation for the minority group, as ordered by court at a previous hearing.

Ranger testified the books were not closed, that they did not show the true condition of the company and that there was no records of salaries or bonuses paid, if any, during 1931. He said there was one account," suspense account," entered in pencil which was puzzling and about which he could learn nothing.

He said he saw items of transactions with the Medford Trust and the Industrial and with the Holston Trap Rock Co., but that it was impossible for him, from the state of the books, to determine the exact state of the finances.

Suspect Is Bailed in Auto Theft Case

be paid $5 each when they call in person at the City Editor's office.

Don't forget, however, that lucky bathers must collect the fruits of their luck within 24 hours of publication of the picture in which they are circled.

That's all there is to this offer—$25 a day divided among four lucky bathers just for being at the beach enjoying a dip and deriving health benefits from the invigorating water of New England's shore places and from the clean air and sunshine.

SHARES IN AWARDS

Four heads are circled, the heads of lucky bathers—and their faces in these instances, are their fortunes, up to $10 or $5. But every $10 and $5 helps in these days.

Tomorrow there will be four other heads circled in another picture or two other pictures taken by the beach photographer, and similar photographs will be published each week day. Therefore, while you are at the beach watch out for the Boston Evening American's beach photographer and his cash-carrying camera.

Why spend a lot of time and money going out of New England for your vacation when you can go, in your own neighborhood, to the finest beaches the nation affords—and profit in cash in addition?

Bathers ahoy!

POLICE RUSE TRAPS YOUTHS

Metropolitan Police Officers Harold P. Boudreau and Leo Cormier posed as laborers to clean up a gang of thieves who have been stealing valuables from automobiles parked along the Nahant Beach.

They arrested Archie Morton, 17, of Chase st., Lynn, and a juvenile yesterday.

Complaints have been pouring into the Metropolitan police but until Boudreau and Cormier decided to don overalls and wander along the beach front with rakes and shovels no progress was made in catching the thieves.

The first day Boudreau and Cormier posed as laborers they captured three boys and almost daily since have arrested one or two.

Articles valued at thousands of dollars have been stolen from parked cars.

Morton will be arraigned in the Lynn District Court this morning and the boy will appear at the juvenile session later in the week.

Music Cure for Crime Wave Urged for Boston Test

The drills, the bits and sledges large,
And all our old yegg cargo,
We have no use for any more,
We're owners now—in large.
—(From "Tezzy" Polio of Folk Songs")

Yessir, the Malady in A. D. can be cured by the Melody in F. Osbourne McConathy, former director of music at Northwestern University, said so today out at Lasell Seminary.

Crime can be killed off in six-eight time by getting the criminals to sing, to play the harmonica, to chant in choirs.

Pickpockets will drop their bad habits and become piccoloists, burglars will basso and bandits will baritone.

All that is needed is to make these tough guys music conscious.

McConathy, who is at LaSalle to attend a meeting of the American Institute of Normal Methods, declared that the music idea is already being tested in two communities.

In Scranton, Pa. there is a miners' choir, while in Philadelphia the street corners have been swept clear in the organizing of a harmonica band, with the cheek blowers, all former bad boys, who have succumbed to the influence of their own music.

"It works," said McConathy firmly. "It works because the real cause of crime is bad use of leisure time. I would like to see this leisure time taken up with music and dancing for three reasons.

"First, music and dancing have a universal appeal. They appeal to everybody, no matter who he may be.

"They give a person self-expression, and self-expression has a stabilizing influence on the country.

"Third, the mental inspiration from music and dancing tends toward higher ideals.

"Boston is the ideal city, the logical city, for developing my theory. Boston is the musical center of the world. Everything in music is right here.

"What expense there might be attached to combatting crime with music could easily be met in every community through the saving in expense for policing. With crime defeated and criminals led away from their evil paths, few policemen would be [illegible]

"Of course, in the developing of a music conscious people, the work must begin early. The start must be made with the children in the schools. The benefit would be mainly to the next generation, although I believe that we could get good results also with older persons at present."

CROOK, GUNMEN, DRUNKARDS AND WIFE BEATERS GET RELIEF

MAN AIDED FOR YEAR SEIZED 30 TIMES AS TIPSY

Others Arrested for Auto Law Violations; Mayor Calls for Stiffer Checkup

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

"Here's the case of a man arrested 30 times for drunkenness and all during that year was receiving welfare aid from the city."

Mayor Curley turned from his sheaf of papers and repeated this charge to a group of welfare workers whom he had called together in the City Council chamber

WARNS OF LAXITY

"This sort of thing cannot go on," he said.

The staff visitors, supervisors and the secretary of the Board of Overseers, Walter V. McCarthy, listened for more than half an hour to Mayor Curley's talk

He told them he knew the visitors whose methods of check-up and investigation were negligent and that soon something would be done about it, if they continued such tactics.

Mayor Curley charged certain city councillors with intimidating welfare workers into approving cases undeserving of aid. He warned them that

"Under the charter I am the only one who can remove you. No city councillor can threaten you or your job. I know there is interference but pay no attention to it. Do your job as it should be done and we will save considerable money to tide us over the coming winter."

RIGID CHECKUP

Since the Evening American's expose of welfare chiselers who get a goodly portion of welfare funds, Mayor Curley has taken drastic measures to put a stop to the practice

"I have asked the police to correct conditions which should have been corrected long ago had welfare workers done the job as it should have been done Now it is up to you to go out and build up a better check-up system. If you don't do it, the police will and if they do it, it will be a reflection on you as visitors in the district."

Mayor Curley pointed out that welfare expenditure, increasing as it is, was disturbing since he didn't know if enough money could be raised to meet the obligation

Fraudulent cases, as have been exposed by the Evening American in a series of stories on chiseling welfare department has spent thousands, the mayor told the group

BURGLAR AIDED

On file at the Hawkins st. headquarters of the welfare department is the case of a husband and wife both of whom were arrested for drunkenness and both of whom were receiving city charity. This case was called to the attention of the welfare officials by the police of Division 7

In addition, the police reported that this man was part-time employed by his father as an ice peddler.

Further police records reveal the case of an East Boston man arrested by East Boston police for breaking and entering in the nighttime

Close to 200 cases of welfare recipients arrested for drunkenness and crimes more serious are on file in the office of John J. Kelly, welfare supervisor at Hawkins st. In many instances, after investigation, the relief has been stopped

ALIASES EXPOSED

Many of the cases are of men who "doubled" on arrests for drunkenness, giving fake names and addresses. Their true identity has been established by welfare cards discovered on them by police.

Men arrested for carrying guns, for automobile violations, for assault and battery on wives, for non-support of minor children have in the past received welfare aid.

Mayor Curley ordered a more thorough investigation and check-up of the new unemployment group of more than 12,000 by welfare workers as a double-check on the investigation which will be instituted by the police department.

ACCUSES ROCHE OF CRUELTY

Mrs. Eleanor B. Roche, wife of Everett's former "Boy Mayor," with Gilbert, 6, the younger of her two children. She charges in her suit asking divorce that the ex-mayor was cruel to her on last St. Valentine's Day. (Staff photos.)

WHERE COUPLE LIVE APART UNDER ONE ROOF

The Roche home in Derne st., Everett, where the "Boy Mayor" occupies the rear and his wife the front. Friends of the couple are trying to effect a reconciliation and Roche himself hopes they are successful.

THREAT FOR SECOND CHILD

Overwhelmed by grief following the drowning of their son, George, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hester, of Lynn, received a note threatening the life of their daughter, Dorothea. George's death, called accidental, occurred at a spot where a previous threat note said his body would be found. The couple are shown reading a threat note.

Divorce Suit Halts Roche Race for Everett Mayor

The divorce action filed by Mrs [illegible] ager of an auto company in Everett, James A. Roche has temporarily left, was a messenger boy at 14. He spiked the former Everett mayor's then worked with a pick and shovel plans to run again this fall for office, he revealed today.

"It will depend now on how the public takes this new development. I was seriously considering running again," the former "Boy Mayor" said, as he rolled rubbish barrels from a garage sidewalk at his home in Derne st., Everett, where he and Mrs. Roche are "living apart."

"It's just another page in the book of life," he sighed. "I hope everything can be fixed up."

Friends of the couple hope the same thing, and steps to reunite them will probably be taken shortly.

MRS. ROCHE IS ILL

Mrs. Roche, who was his campaign manager and his most active worker when he left a pick and shovel job to enter politics, was reported to be ill after starting the divorce action.

A woman who answered the doorbell at the front of the house (Roche is occupying the rear) said she was too ill to talk.

The couple have two children Virginia 14, and Gilbert, 6.

The suit, alleging cruel and abusive treatment on Feb. 14, 1932 was brought by Mrs. Roche two weeks ago but the papers were not filed and made public until yesterday at Middlesex probate court, East Cambridge

The acts of cruelty alleged in the divorce papers are also a mystery. Mrs. Roche and her husband both refused to discuss them and Mrs Roche went as far as to say she would never tell, not even in court incidentally the date mentioned is St. Valentine's Day

Friends are certain the affair can be straightened out satisfactorily. Both husband and wife last night also indicated that the affair might end peaceably by their complimentary remarks about the other

PRAISE EACH OTHER

Mrs. Roche declared her husband was the finest man in the world and had been a real and devoted husband. Roche in turn characterized his wife as a "great helpmate a good mother, a good woman and an ideal wife."

State Auditor Francis X Hurley last night made formal announcement of his candidacy for renomination on the Democratic ticket.

Auditor Hurley has been mentioned prominently as a candidate for lieutenant-governor this year and it is understood that he has been giving the second place nomination serious consideration

He said in a statement that the work which he set out to do—that of having the proper duties and powers returned to the office of the auditor—is not completed and that he hopes to carry on his fight during another two-year term in office

Hurley declared also that in addition to urging his own candidacy, he will work for the success of the Democratic ticket, national and State, "whatever may have been my preference of candidates before the recent convention"

BOY STICKS TO BIKE FOR FUN

Although Arthur R. Vorce, 18 year-old Natick boy, has been given an automobile for his daily 40-mile trips between his home in Natick and his work in Charlestown he will continue to use his bicycle for pleasure

Young Vorce, who estimates that he has traveled 15,000 miles on his cycle in the past five years, declared when he graciously refused the gift of a small coupe from a Boston woman

Miss Nannie Gunnison of Westland ave, upon learning that young Vorce pedaled some 20 miles before dawn each morning to be at work at 4 a. m., offered to give the youngster her own automobile. She only drives once a week, she said, and she is willing to forego that pleasure to help a plucky boy.

She communicated with the boy and yesterday he was given the car

"I'll miss my morning cycle trips," he said. "But still I'll be able to use my bike when I get home in the afternoon and for trips on Sunday. My auto will be for business and my bike for pleasure."

THEN JENNIE'S VOICE, hoarse with crying: "Did he send me any message?"

"No Jennie."

"Jeanie, I'll see you before you go?"

"No, if you don't mind," Jennie said carefully. Then she cried out over the wire, "Lynn, you're such a darned sweet kid! I'd like to think of you—happy. That would help a lot."

"You'll write me, Jennie?"

"Sure I'll write. Good by," said Jennie.

But she wouldn't write. Lynn knew that. Farewell to Jennie . . . farewell.

Tom was oblivious of everything but his work. Forty-five minutes of Cherry Blossom music was broadcast. Then it was over.

"Pretty gay crowd," said the announcer, and looked around the room.

Tom looked, too. The room was well filled; they were dancing. "Sweet music," Tom agreed, tapping his foot.

"Let's get going," suggested the announcer. "Hey, what's the big idea?" he asked, in amazement.

Tom had seen Lynn. At a corner table with Dwight. Her hand lay on the table. Dwight's covered it. He was leaning close, speaking to her eagerly.

She was listening. Once she spoke. Once she nodded and smiled.

"Lord!" said Tom aloud.

"Came on," urged the announcer impatiently. "Have you taken root?"

After a moment Tom stumbled after the other man out into the sleeping gardens where snow was falling and lanterns swayed in the wind.

TELLS HIS LOVE

Dwight had been saying back there in the noisy room, "But you must have known always that I loved you, Lynn. I've come to an agreement with Mrs. Dwight. She will set me free. She's abroad now; we'll run it through, routine fashion, in Paris, and I'll come back to you. Or would you join me there in the late spring? We could be married in England."

She said slowly, astonished beyond measure, beyond computation, ashamed of herself: "I don't love you."

"But you like me?"

This was where she nodded and smiled. She said, "I like you very much. Dwight—"

"Don't answer now," Dwight said quickly. "I'll wait. I'll see you after I again until you're ready. Shall we dance?"

Tom saw them rise, saw her go into Dwight's arms before he left. His duties for the evening were over. He went straight to Lynn's apartment house and was announced to Sarah. She opened the door herself.

"Why, Tom!" she said, astonished

It was late. She was ready to go to bed. She rest, not to sleep. She had not slept well recently.

"I had to see you. I've just come from a house not 100 yards away. I saw Lynn there with Dwight. He was holding her hand across the table, and he couldn't take his eyes her up. What does this mean, Sarah?" Tom demanded.

Sarah sat down in the nearest chair. "I don't know," she admitted.

"She belongs to me," said Tom. "She knows it. What is she doing with him?"

SARAH ASKS QUESTION

Sarah asked a question in her turn. "What has happened between you? You must tell me, Tom, if I'm to help you."

He told her briefly. When he had finished he repeated, "I didn't do it. She just jumped at the conclusion. Didn't give me a chance. I could produce Rawlson, of course."

"Rawlson knew?"

"Sure; he suggested it in the first place."

She asked Tom suddenly, "Do you know where Bob Rawlson lives?"

"Why, yes," he answered; "it isn't far from here. Why?"

"Go there," ordered Sarah, "now, this instant! Make him tell you to whom he has talked recently. Force him to."

Tom knew he could trust her. He left and went out to find Bob Rawlson.

Sarah went downstairs and spoke to the superintendent, who knew her intimacy with Lynn. She had she told him, an urgent message to give the younger woman. She wanted to wait in Lynn's room until she came in. Irritatious, the superintendent admitted her.

She waited there through the longest hours of her life. No, not the longest; she recalled those others—she had to.

Would Lynn come in alone?

As it happened, she did not. The car drew up at the door shortly after one o'clock. They had dined late, lingered to dance and talk. Tom had been in the inn from eight-thirty until a quarter past nine Sarah's apartment.

"May I come in for a moment?" Dwight asked outside the door. "You know I've never seen your place."

Lynn had her hand on the knob. "Why, it's open!" she exclaimed in astonishment. "No, of course you can't come in."

"If it's open, I must," he answered. "Suppose the place has been broken or something!"

"But that's nonsense! Still, I am sure I shut the door."

Sarah listened, waiting.

TURNED KNOB

Dwight turned the knob; the door swung. He stepped into the room, saying over his shoulder, "Wait out there a moment, darling." Then, "Sarah!" he said, on the heels of that betraying endearment.

"I was waiting for Lynn," Sarah told him. "I didn't expect you, too." But inevitably she had.

"I'll call you tomorrow, Lynn."

It was to Dwight that Sarah addressed herself now. "Do you remember our conversation this summer at your house?"

"Perfectly," he admitted coolly.

"Then you must recall that you gave me your word, which you have broken."

Sarah said quietly, "It doesn't matter, except to Lynn. Lynn quarrelled with Tom because I thought that against her express wishes he had sold his confidential information to outsiders. That's neither here nor there. You know quite well what I'm talking about. Lynn confided in you last summer. You yourself told me so. It would have been easy for you to find and approach the person who had made the original suggestion to Tom, and to learn from him the moment when it would be wise to buy what stock you could through various investment houses and in small lots."

"Then Tom didn't——" began Lynn. Her face was colorless.

"No, Tom didn't, I'm certain of that," Sarah told her, and turned to Dwight again. "You'll deny any complicity, of course. Although it was, I suppose, my fault. I haven't forgotten that you asked me with whom Tom was intimate in the bank; or that I told you Rawlson."

"You're out of your mind;" he said. "I know Rawlson, of course, casually, as Norton's secretary. That is all."

"It doesn't matter," said Sarah again, "although I congratulate you on your sagacity. It isn't everyone who does a little business on the side, while managing to separate two young people who care for each other."

"Sarah," he asked in magnificent bewilderment, "what on earth has come over you lately? It's not like you to take to melodrama."

A MARRIED MAN

She said shortly, "Never mind that. The fact remains that you're a married man. And that both you and Lynn should know better."

"I shan't be a married man very long," Dwight informed her. "Or rather, not married to the present Mrs. Dwight." He waited a moment and then drove home. He wanted to hurt the woman sitting there facing him; wanted to hurt her so that she would cry out. "Mrs. Dwight has done me the honor to consent to a divorce," he said, "and so I have asked Lynn to marry me when my freedom is fait accompli."

"Oh," said Sarah, low. She turned to Lynn, "Is this true?" she asked.

"Yes, it's true, Sarah; he did ask me to marry him. But I don't understand about Bob Rawlson and Tom and—"

"That can wait. Do you love him?"

"Please, Sarah, this is embarrassing and unnecessary," Dwight said. He was no longer smiling.

Sarah took her eyes from Dwight's face. She asked, "Lynn, did you mention Bob Rawlson on that occasion?"

"No. Not by name. I said Tom had an acquaintance who'd advise him." Her face was drawn; the black arrow on her forehead was clear against her pallor. For the first time she looked at Dwight, spoke directly to him. "Why did you do it? Why did you let me think, cause me to think that Tom——"

He answered, smiling, "My dear, didn't I tell you all's fair in love and business?"

She was silent, her lips shaking. Sarah answered for her.

"Perhaps. But it's hardly a basis for a happy marriage. You have never had the ghost of a chance to make Lynn happy, David. You've even less now. Even if she had not learned what she's learning tonight she would have married you with another man in her heart. You—" she spoke regretfully—"you couldn't make any woman happy, David, not any more. You've lost so much."

Dwight took a step toward them. His eyes were no longer expressionless. "What right have you to say that?" he asked violently. "I love Lynn. I can make her happy. I will make her happy. I have never," he said, deliberately, not forgetting to stab, "cared for any woman as I do for her. She'll forget about this; I'll make her forget. I tell you I love her; I'd give her the world, if I could!"

Sarah said "I suppose so. Let you told me that once, I remember."

"You—and David?" asked Lynn. It was the first time she had spoken directly to Dwight's Christian name."

"Yes; I and David."

"Twenty years ago," Dwight reminded Lynn smoothly. "Remember that."

He was instantly sorry he had said it It dated him, somehow

"You were going to marry him?" asked Lynn of Sarah. "I—why didn't you tell me? I didn't know, or dream."

He said soothingly, as one speaks to a child, "Darling, you would never have known, from me. What Sarah's motive is—" He shrugged But he knew her motives. He said "Don't look at me like that. It happened so long ago; it was over so long ago. We were young and lonely and—"

She said, shaken, "Don't cry for me, Lynn. As David says, it was over long ago. If you had cared for him I would have been silent; you would never have known. But you don't care for him, Lynn; you love Tom. I had to show you how little you care for—David. If you had cared, you wouldn't have turned to me; thought first of me."

Dwight asked, after a moment, "Lynn, will you come here to me?"

She rose unsteadily and walked a few steps toward him. His hands went out to her, pleading, eager, ardent. She shrank away.

"Don't touch me; don't touch me; don't dare touch me!"

He looked at Lynn, but her eyes were averted. He put his hand on the doorknob. He said. "I'll come back."

No one spoke. The door opened under the pressure of his fingers Tom, racing past toward the elevators, stopped, wheeled and flung himself into the room

He said, "Oh, no, you don't! You stay here!"

There was a moment of confusion. Sarah stiffened in her chair, and sighed, Lynn cried, "Tom!" incredulously. His hair was in wild disorder; his cheek was bruised his collar torn. He pushed Dwight back into the room ahead of him and slammed the door

"We'll have this out" he said.

"You'll excuse me," Dwight commented coolly, "if I say I don't care to stay any longer."

"You'll stay!" Tom contradicted. "Look here, you. Somehow you found out that there was something going on at the bank. I don't know how; it doesn't signify. You went to Rawlson and got all the dope you needed. And you've made money on his tip. That doesn't concern me. I don't care how much jack you make or how you make it. What does concern me is Lynn. Lynn thought I'd tipped someone off and was getting my whack.

GOT IT OUT OF RAWLSTON

Well, I didn't. You did. I got it out of Rawlson." He looked with satisfaction at his knuckles. They, too, were bruised. "I'll say he worked for his money! He didn't tell me until I made him. But before you go, perhaps you'll be good enough to tell Lynn and Miss Bennet that I didn't have anything to do with this stock manipulation."

Dwight said clearly, "No, you didn't. You're too much of a fool. I'm not."

The door shut behind him

"Well!" said Tom and looked from Lynn to Sarah; they were staring at him in silence. "Well, that's that!" He felt idiotic. His fine high fervor had passed. He was let down. "I must look like the devil," he said, after a moment.

The spell that had been on Lynn's limbs relaxed and released her and she flashed into life. She sprang to her feet and ran to him, putting up her arms. "Tom, are you hurt! Did he hurt you?"

"Who? Bob? Not as much as I hurt him," Tom told her, grinning. "Hey, what are you crying for? I'm all right."

"I'm not crying; I'm laughing Yes, I am crying, but just because I'm happy." She was close in his arms now; she was saying, "Tom, please forgive me, please!"

Sarah got out of her chair and walked stiffly toward the door. She said dimly, "Everything's all right now."

But they did not hear.

Tom put Lynn in a chair and managed to occupy the same chair himself.

ASKED FORGIVENESS

"Tom, can you ever forgive me for getting you into this mess?" she asked. "For telling David Dwight?" She said suddenly, in honest astonishment, "And I though I was such a good business woman, so close-mouthed, so loyal! But I was just a fool, heard I thought I could trust him!"

Tom grinned It didn't matter Nothing mattered Lynn was his own

"We'll get married, but not tomorrow! I have to wire home and see if they'll come on for it. I think they will, Mother and Father, I mean. I couldn't be married without them." she told him.

"Then we'll wait," he agreed, "but not long. Mother and Father, that sounds pretty darned good to me. They must be swell, Lynn, or they'd never have had you. And Sarah—she's family, too. And Hank and Silas. We'll have a regular wedding party." He grinned at her, "Going to ask Dwight?"

She shook her head. "He wouldn't come," she said soberly, "even if I did; as I'd ask him, after everything."

The next morning Tom called for her, his hours, as it happened, more or less coinciding with hers. They drove uptown in the "new car." "It runs," said Lynn, "like a dream."

"We'll go honeymooning in it," never Ben's long suit, as you know. You've got the little bit mother left, of course, but that won't be much Sondra did not answer, but her heart began to beat in a quick, frightened way.

What could she do?

SHE HAD FRIENDS

There were friends who would take her for a time, of course! Sondra thought, but one could not go on for ever sponging for hospitality, besides, when it was known that she hadn't any money, would anyone be anxious for her company? She knew they would not

Flora said abruptly, "I wish to heaven you could marry John Anderson; can't you make him get rid of his wife?"

"I'm not sure that John has any overwhelming desire to marry me," Sondra said. "Besides . . . isn't it rather a contradiction, to advise me to put my head in the noose you're so anxious to escape? Do you think I should be any happier than you are, if I married for money."

"But you like John, don't you?" Flora said amazed. "I always thought you were frightfully fond of him."

"Fond of him!" Sondra echoed "I'm fond of lots of men, but I haven't the least desire to marry any of them."

Flora sighed. "Somehow I thought it was more than that—I thought you were in love with him," she said

"In love with him —" Sondra raised her eyes and looked at her reflection in the mirror "What made you think that?" she asked slowly.

"Oh, I don't know — but when you're together you seem so suited. I've always felt that even if you marry anybody else, John will always be the one you should have married."

HE WOULD BE FLATTERED

"I should think he would be tremendously flattered."

Flora came across to her sister "What's the matter with me?" she said in a strangely shaken voice. "We've change so—both of us. We used to be the greatest pals—we always told each other everything—everything we hoped for and dreamed about—and we're quite changed. What's the matter with us, Sondra?"

Sondra turned her shoulder to Flora it of her a touch

"It's life, I suppose," she said quietly. "And the way we've been brought up. It's no good being mushy about it—" but it angered her because she felt the tears in her eyes.

Flora turned away

"You're harder than I am," she said "And perhaps you're lucky; you won't suffer so much. Don't ever get fond of anyone, Sondra—get really fond—it's not happiness—it's just suffering all the time."

"Are you so fond of Jocelyn?" Sondra asked

"I'd die for him."

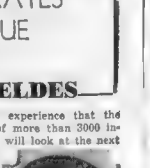
SUCKER LIST RATES YOUR VALUE PER 1000

By GILBERT SELDES

IT HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED by experience that the second mail delivery in any community of more than 3000 inhabitants is practically worthless. If you will look at the next batch that comes to you, you will find that all of it is readdressed from your former residence, or perhaps from the place you lived in eight years ago. These are the appeals for funds, opportunities to subscribe to encyclopedias, magazines and private editions, handkerchiefs with your initials made in an almshouse, and all the other predestined fillers of long suffering wastebaskets.



GILBERT SELDES

1-2 Cent a Chemist

I have just discovered the huge business which makes these letters possible. What you call a sucker list is correctly called a mailing list "for the development of new markets for various industries," and the catalog alone of these lists is terrifying. There is a special section of Key-Men in Industry, and you may buy the names and addresses of 2000 Chief Chemists for $10.000, which is half a cent for each whereas if you want 200 Health Food Stores, you will pay $6.50, or three full one-thousand cents each. There is satisfaction in knowing that Health Food Stores are either more prosperous or more inaccessible than Malt and Hop Dealers, of whom you may buy 1700 at the rate of one-half cent.

Birth to Death

It is improbable that you are one of the 350 Coin Operating Vending Machine Dealers and Operators; but if the list fails to catch you there, you may be among the 3200 Office Supply Dealers, who can be had for $20.00, or one of the 2160 Paper Box Manufacturers at $7.50 per thousand. The list has Physicians and Hospitals, in case you are just born, and Undertakers and Cemeteries, in case you come to die, Cemeteries being a little more costly than Hospitals.

Clubs, Per Thousand

Nor is the social life of our country neglected. In fact, social distinctions are drawn in the price list with a delicacy which I find baffling. Among the items are

1720 Clubs, prominent, per M	$8.50
4600 Golf & Country Clubs, per M	8.50
1900 Clubs, Rotary, per M	7.50
2800 Clubs, Women's, per M	8.50
1190 Clubs, Y. M. C. A., per M	8.50
1020 Clubs, Kiwanis	10.00

I can see why Clubs, Prominent, should be more costly than Clubs, Rotary, but it hardly seems right to me that Clubs, Kiwanis, should cost twenty-five per cent more than Clubs, Rotary. It seems to me that a low valuation is set on 110,000 Bank Directors, at $7.50 per thousand, which is exactly what is charged for Bank Cashiers and Barbers, whereas, Bellhangers and Locksmiths come to about $9.00 a thousand. These bank people are apparently the best of the suckers, because they are rated with 300,000 Small Town Investors, while Bands and Orchestras are on a level with 80,000 Wealthy Investors, at $8.50.

Farmers Dirt Cheap

If you want to have your name costly, it is safest to be a Co-operative Selling Organization and Chain Hardware Syndicate, at three and a half cents. But if you are a responsible Delicatessen Store your price goes down to less than half a cent. Perhaps it is safest to have no name at all or just be a farmer—one of two million who can be had at $7.50 per thousand and no questions asked.

Sound Sense

"You are certain," runs the announcement, "to see something that interests you in this price list." And a further notice is, "Many a sale is lost because the address of the buyer has been mislaid or has never been heard of.' Unacquainted as I am with business principles, this last strikes me as being fundamentally sound, and the compiler's assertion that with Direct-By-Mail advertising "you can cover ground faster, strike harder, and move to a new sector in less time than the other fellow," sounds reasonable also, especially the part about moving from the hand to the wastebasket. But I think I like chiefly the broad universal friendliness of these lists.

Everybody Welcome

Although I do not find 68,012 Pacifists at $4.00 per thousand, and 970,309 Militarists at double the price, I discover that the list plays no favorites. It offers you 800 Insurance Agents at Conventions and immediately thereafter 1400 Wagon Distributors. "They are really grocery stores on wheels and can successfully rival chain stores;" and if neither the Chains nor the Wagons will cover the ground, you can buy the 2800 Commissary Stores, which last year bought over $300,000,000 worth of goods, and so be sure that your coverage is complete.

Omit the Mail

Take a final word of advice from the man who offers you 15,000 Book Lovers, Scattered, and 12,000 Book Lovers, Scientific. After a long experience he has no hesitation in declaring that "it is only necessary to concentrate upon the lists that contain the greatest possibilities . . . This is based upon a premise that must eventuate as surely as the stars must shine." With, however, a word of warning that even the most constrained are apt to wander from the true line of action." Or, perhaps, we might save a considerable amount of wear and tear by not having a second mail at all.

told him. "I love it and especially your working 'way up in the tower and me working down below under the same roof."

"There's a lot of us under it, and darned lucky to be there," Tom said.

The street was black with hurrying people. The winter sky was clear and cold and blue, the sun pals golden-yellow. A plane passed overhead, casting its strange small shadow on the cool ides of the great building

MAKE UP, URGES MISS BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Boy and Girl Have Parted for No Real Reason, and She Wants to Get Him Back

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For over a year I went with a certain boy, then we broke up and have seen each other only once since. It seems as if he still likes me, and I really love him, but he never comes to see me any more.

He talks as if he is coming back sometime, but sometime never comes. Do you think he wants to come back? Tell me what I should do about it. Thank you.

J. G.

Dear J. G.: Sometimes young people drift apart for no real reason, or no reason that can be discovered. One or the other becomes unduly sensitive and imagines some fancied neglect. Or it's a pure case of nerves or stagfright that makes them do unaccountable things—rush by without speaking, get "mad" for no cause at all, then weep and regret. It's a wise "lover and his lass" that can keep on an even keel during the mad glad days of courtship. Bear this in mind. In the case of my young correspondent, better write him a little note and invite him to call, then stop breaking up for no good reason. Watch your step

Wants an Introduction

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

There is a girl who lives on the same street with me, and I like her so much. I see her pass by quite often. Would it seem bold if I spoke to her, as I don't know anyone who could introduce us?

GUY.

Dear Guy—Young people who speak on the street without knowing each other lay themselves open to the charge of "picking 'em up," and really nice people don't do that. If you use your imagination and ingenuity, I'm sure you can scrape acquaintance with this young lady. Find out what church she attends and go to the young people's meeting. Someone in charge should be able to introduce you. Does she belong to any organization like the "Camp Fire Girls"? You can really become acquainted properly if you use your head.

Brutal Treatment at Home

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm ashamed to tell you that I'm almost twenty-one and am beaten like a dog every time my stepmother sets my father against me. I'm a drudge round the house and have never misbehaved myself. I have no girl or boy friends because my stepmother will not allow it. I've heard the neighbors talk about this, and they seem to think she is crazy—the kind of craziness that gets pleasure out of seeing something tortured. What can I do? I work and try to be good so that God may reward me and then for no reason at all she will urge my father to beat me. I have been through high school and would take any kind of work. We live in the country, where chances to work are scarce. Do give me a little advice.

Minnie W.

Dear Minnie: Unfortunately, there is a kind of insanity such as your stepmother seems to be suffering from. The horrible Riley case is still fresh in the public mind. The father and stepmother are now serving a two-year jail sentence for keeping a girl locked in a dark closet and beating her. Are any of your mother's relatives living? If so, write to them and offer to do the housework for room and board. If this isn't possible, state your case to the Commonwealth Attorney and have your stepmother and father bound over to keep the peace. Get the co-operation of the neighbors who know about your case. There is no reason in the world why a girl who writes me as intelligent a letter as you have, should be the victim of brutality.

Listen, World! Thirty-five Too Old?

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WHEN'S A MAN too old to work?

Does his usefulness cease at 35? If you were an employer with a big position to fill, would you give it to the lively young fellow under 30 and pass up the slower, quieter fellow who has been through the mill?

Elsie Robinson

There's a question that started before hard times commenced, and will still be going strong when they're through. C. E. Reeves, of Philadelphia, would like to hear your answer. Here's part of his letter:

"Relief bills and political programs aren't going to mend things for a lot of us who are up against the 'age limitations' prejudice. For years now there has been an increasing trend in big business to reject men over 35 years of age. Hundreds of thousands of men are now sitting at home in utter despair because they know that, even when prosperity does return, they will be turned down because they are 'too old.'

"What's going to happen to us? Are our homes to be broken up, our wives sent with us to the poor house, our children committed to charitable institutions? Can't something be done to regulate this cold-hearted policy on the part of big business? The government saved the slaves. The modern American man—and woman worker, too—who is over 35 is reduced to worse than slavery.

"What is responsible for this condition?"

I suspect that the cussedness of the over-thirty worker is primarily responsible for it, friend. Many of us have become powerful "set in our ways," by the time we're 35. We don't look old or act old, but we THINK and FEEL old. And the more successful we are, the more "set" we're apt to be—the more sure that OUR method is the only right one.

I can't speak for the man worker, but I know scores of women workers who are disqualified for this reason. They're smart, attractive, skilled workers; but you "can't tell them anything." They have acquired certain habits of thought and work which they refuse to change.

AND THE SKILFUL EMPLOYER FEELS THIS RESISTANCE IN THEM. HE SEES THE BATTLE AHEAD IF HE TRIES TO CHANGE THEIR ATTITUDE AND METHODS, AND HE PREFERS TO TRAIN A YOUNGSTER RATHER THAN ATTEMPT TO ADJUST A STUBBORN ADULT.

That's the way it looks to me; but perhaps I'm wrong.

And if you were an employer, would you, or wouldn't you, respect that "age limitation prejudice"?

SKETCHED IN PARIS

The Marry-Go-Round

Wives—And Ex-Wives

By HELEN ROWLAND

THERE ARE certain moods in which a man is completely immune to the dangers of marriage and the wiles of women. Usually, when he doesn't need anybody to help him love himself, pity himself or amuse himself.

Many a loving wife spends half her life trying to analyze a man's little traits and idiosyncrasies, and ends by being thankful if she can just memorize them.

WHAT PRICE BEAUTY

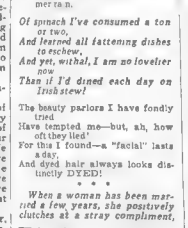
The health fads I have known to wax and wane
Have gripped the public fancy for a while—



Then passed as lightly as a summer rain.

Of spinach I've consumed a ton or two,
And learned all fattening dishes to eschew,
And yet, withal, I am no lovelier now
Than if I'd dined each day on Irish stew!

The beauty parlors I have fondly tried
Have tempted me—but, ah, how often they lied!
For this I found—a "facial" lasts a day,
And dyed hair always looks distinctly DYED!

carries it home and lays it before her husband as triumphantly as she would a vindication.

When a woman recalls what a struggle she had getting her husband to the altar, it must seem like sheer, wilful waste to shoot him, when she might hand him over to some sweet young thing who has been waiting for just such a break.

A man as such a study in black-and-white that a woman can read all the popular books on psychoanalysis and behaviorism, and still be completely at sea about the human paradox whose grape-fruit she sugars and whose coffee she pours every morning.

Some women would feel that a husband was being unfaithful if he looked twice at the Statue of Liberty.

American's Daily True Story

You Can't Figure Women

"I'VE BEEN at that racket for 30 years," said Dan Halton, "and if there's one thing I've learned it's that you never can tell what a woman will do."

No one answered Halton, all sensing a story behind the remark. Halton was one of the best confidence men in America.

"There was that time we made a play for young Hibbard," Halton went on. "He had just inherited a lot of dough and was throwing it around."

Halton's plan, as he explained it, was simple. It needed only a man and two women.

NO ROUGH STUFF

"Ruth Collins was our front," said Halton. "She managed to meet Hibbard at a mountain summer resort. After a week or so she tells him that her niece is coming to visit her and a few days later Joyce Randolph shows up.

"Well, Ruth introduces Joyce to Hibbard and he sort of falls for her.

"Then, after a week or two, we're set. Ruth casually tells Hibbard that she and Ruth have to go into the city for a few days and that the trains are so slow and dirty that she dreads the trip. Of course, Hibbard offers to drive them in.

"On the day they're to start Ruth says she has a headache and that she wants to rest for awhile. Then, later in the day, she pretends to receive a telegram saying that either she or Joyce must be in the city that night. She says she's too sick to go, but insists that Joyce go.

ALL SET

"In one way or another Ruth delays their start until it's almost dark. Then I come into the picture, but not where Hibbard can see me. He has his car filled with gas, but it's no trick at all to empty the tank until only about three gallons are in it. The idea is that they'll run out of gas on a mountain road and have to put up at some farmhouse.

"Then when they come back the next day, I'm to appear as Joyce's uncle and put it up to Hibbard man to man. He's compromised Joyce and all that, and it will cost plenty to fix it. I figured on about twenty thousand.

"Well, for two days they don't arrive. But we did get a letter. It was from Joyce and was addressed to Ruth. But it was intended for me, too.

"What do you think happened? Joyce and young Hibbard are married. They hadn't gone ten miles before Joyce breaks down and opens up and tells him everything. While we thought he was falling for her she was falling for him, too. Of course he forgave her and got noble and all that and asked her to marry him anyhow.

"But that isn't all. Joyce knew I was going to almost empty the gasoline tank and just before the start she had it filled up again."

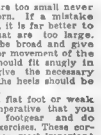
Normal Feet an Essential to Health

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

RECENTLY I wrote about the importance of walking as a form of exercise, and there can be no question of its value, providing the health of the feet permits walking in comfort. Today I want to give you a few rules relating to the care of the feet.



Dr. Copeland

Comfort in walking is possible only when the feet function normally. It is also true that to a remarkable degree the general health is dependent upon the health of the feet.

Disturbances in the nervous system and other unpleasant disorders often are traceable to the feet.

Shoes that are too small never should be worn. If a mistake must be made, it is far better to wear shoes that are too large. Shoes should be broad and give ample room for movement of the toes. They should fit snugly in the arch, to give the necessary support, and the heels should be broad and low.

If you have flat foot or weak foot, it is imperative that you wear proper footgear and do special foot exercises. These corrective exercises, most important in overcoming weakness of the muscles of the foot and leg, should be done in bare or stockinged feet.

Stand with the feet separated and slowly rise as high as possible upon the balls of the feet. Hold this position a few seconds, then slowly drop to the floor, carrying the weight upon the outer borders of the feet. Repeat this exercise 20 times a day.

Too Much Red Spoils Beauty of Skin

WHEN FACTORY blushes of vivid hue are placed upon a complexion that has fallen into a state of depression — crinkles round the eyes, tissues draped, cutaneous surface grey or sallow—they call attention to defects, impart an appearance of fatigue. And that's why the older gals must be cautious with the pigment. A faint, wild rose film, applied not too low, may work in the cause of rejuvenation, but it must be skillfully blended with powder a shade darker than the complexion. When the middle-aged darling tries to make herself look juvenilish, she only makes herself look older.

RUINOUS to the little Paris model is the slumped-in chest cavity. Clothes are built these days for figures that are something more than skin and bones. By deep breathing, by standing with hips back and tummy muscles tight, the chest works will come out of their slump, balloon outward as good chest works should. Arm swinging is suggested, and if there's a flat iron in each hand, success is almost sure to come.

Martha Lee Favorite Recipes

Old Reliables Culled From the Cooking School

By MARTHA LEE

I'VE JUST been looking over our file book and I've picked out two recipes that we haven't published lately and yet are so good that I do want to introduce them to our new friends and to bring them again to the attention of the folks who have been following this column so long.

Firstly, there's a chicken loaf that's mighty good served either hot or cold on a platter garnished with sliced tomatoes, dipped in French dressing, and lettuce hearts or watercress.

Here 'tis:

CHICKEN LOAF

1 cup chicken stock.
1½ tsp. pepper.
1 small minced onion.
2 eggs, beaten.
2 cups soft bread crumbs.
8 medium tomatoes.
Lettuce or watercress.

Mix all the ingredients except the tomatoes and cress. Stir well, pour into a greased loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 F., for one hour, or until firm and slightly brown. Of course, veal or even lamb, could be substituted for the chicken, and for a small family you may wish to halve the recipes. Although, it's so good cold, that I think you won't find it too much if you make it in its full quantity.

Prune bread is the other favorite that fits beautifully into the summer picnic basket or the business lunch box.

PRUNE BREAD

1 cup sugar
½ tsp. salt
1 egg, beaten
2 tbsps. melted fat
1 cup chopped nut meats
1 cup drained stewed prunes, cut fine
1 cup unsifted graham flour
1 tsp. soda
1 cup thick sour milk
½ cup prune juice
¼ tsp. tartrate or phosphate baking powder or ½ tsp. phosphate-sulphate baking powder
1½ cups all-purpose flour

Combine the sugar, salt and beaten egg and mix well. Add the melted fat, nut meats and prunes. Mix together the soda, sour milk and prune juice. Sift baking powder with white flour. Mix with graham flour. Then add the flour to the egg mixture alternately with the sour-milk mixture. Beat all together well. Turn into a medium-sized greased loaf pan and bake in a slow oven of 325 deg. F., for 1¼ to 1¾ hours, or until done.

Both of them KEEP FIT

1932. OLYMPIC YEAR. The strongest, healthiest, and ablest men of many countries are meeting in California. They are in the peak of condition . . . abounding with stored-up energy.

At home, millions of others are working, golfing, swimming. They keep fit. Keep active. Keep well by eating wisely and heartily.

Kellogg's PEP Bran Flakes are food for active bodies. Made of whole wheat—nature's almost perfect food. Easy to digest. Full of nourishment. Enough bran to be mildly laxative.

And they're packed with the famous flavor of Pep. Crisp. Cooling. Delicious with milk or cream. Popular with the whole family for breakfast, lunch or supper. A delightful bedtime bite. Mothers like PEP because it is easy to serve . . . more sensible than hot, heavy foods in summer.

RANKIN WARNS OF BANK PLOT IN DEBT MOVE

Washington, July 27 (US)—Calling Senator Borah's proposal to barter $11,000,000,000 in war debts owed to the United States "the most astounding political development of recent months," Representative Rankin (D), of Mississippi, one of the leaders in the cancellation" provision in the "Hoover moratorium" resolution, today said he thought Congress "had forever put a stop to that agitation

BURDEN TO TAXPAYERS

The debts cannot be canceled or reduced without violation of law, Rankin said.

"The great cry in this country today is for a reduction of governmental expenses in order to lighten the burden of the American taxpayers," Rankin said. "They have been taxed to more than they can bear," and yet Senator Borah comes forward with this proposal that would embroil on to the taxpayers of this country an additional burden of $11,000,000,000—or an average of about $,500,000,000 to each State.

AID PRIVATE LENDERS

"These international bankers have $10,000,000,000 loaned abroad. If they can succeed in inducing us to cancel our foreign debts, or the foreign debts owed to the United States, then it will strengthen those bankers' private loans abroad.

"We would then be paying the cost of both sides of the war. That $11,000,000,000 would be transferred to the backs of the people of the United States, to be collected through coming generations through sales taxes, stamp taxes, tariffs and other nuisance taxes which these same international bankers hope to have substituted, in order that the burden may rest on the shoulders of the helpless masses and permit the escape of those most able to pay."

$60,000,000 IN BOND DEPOSITS

New York, July 27 (AP)—More than $60,000,000 principal of real estate bonds, on which interest payments have been defaulted, have been deposited with the protective committee headed by George Roosevelt.

The committee was formed early this year as a means of giving representation to scattered holders of defaulted realty bonds who had no way of giving voice to their interest in proposed reorganizations of buildings and other properties on which had gone into receivership.

A report issued today by the committee submitted to the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants which has control of the field in an extensive investigation.

Francis K. Steve , vice-pres. ent of Brown, Wheelock, Harris & Co., Inc., recommended that in cities or towns where realty bonds are in default a committee be appointed of five outstanding business men. With no legal or real estate connections, either by the mayor, institutions or the Chamber of Commerce.

STEEL OUTLOOK IS IMPROVED

New York, July 27 (AP)—Though steel ingot production remains at last week's rate, 18 per cent, sentiment in the trade shows marked improvement on expectation of a seasonal pick-up not later than September, Iron Age said today.

Reports of good crops and strengthening of farm products prices are sustaining factor in the raising of hopes for early business betterment, the review said.

"Not the least of the favorable factors, from the view point of the steel industry," the publication review, "is the firmness of steel prices, which have reached more solid ground through the shipment of practically all the low priced tonnage carried over from the second quarter

"The chief factor is not losing sight of the fact that the requirements of two important consuming groups, the automobile industry and the can manufacturers, are declining and that an increase in business must come from other sources.

"A movement is on foot to persuade the railroads to under take the repair of upward of half a million freight cars with funds to be provided by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Such a program would require between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 tons of iron and steel."

Pittsfield Seeks Bids on Bond Issue

Pittsfield will receive bids until 11 a. m. August 1 for $25,000 water extension bonds dated August 1, and payable 1933 to 1937. Bidder to name rate of interest in multiples of ¼ of 1 per cent.

Taunton awarded $90,000 5 per cent macadam pavement bonds dated June 1, 1932, and payable 1933 to 1937 to Jackson & Curtis

Cotton Steady in New York Market

GARSAUD IS OFF POWER BOARD

Washington, July 27 Strengthening of the new progressive [illegible] of the Federal Power Commission was seen today with the resignation, effective December 1, of Commissioner Marcel Garsaud of New Orleans.

Garsaud left for home yesterday after a conference with President Hoover which did not result in a recess appointment for the Louisianan. His friends said he was unwilling to accept one

Garsaud a confirmation for a new term was blocked at the last session by Senator Huey Long (D) of Louisiana and Senate Progressives who charged he was friendly to the power interests. The Interstate Commerce Committee deferred reporting his nomination until December

He will seek revenge upon Long by campaigning for Senator Broussard (D) of Louisiana, who is opposed for renomination by a Long ally, Representative John N. Overton.

Meanwhile the commission is preparing to investigate important principles, progressive in color, in its formal decision on the Alabama Power Co. rate case. In the Mitchell dam project, expected in the next few days

Fresh Upturns in Grains Are Staged

Chicago, July 27 (AP)—Responsive to higher prices at Liverpool since early in June, grain values here made fresh upturns today. The new crop Chicago September wheat contracts to 3¼ cents above last week's inside figures. Opening ¾ to 1¼ up, Chicago wheat futures subsequently reacted somewhat, then unchanged to ¼ higher and afterward surged

Steel Scrap Prices Up 16 Cents a Ton

New York, July 27 (AP)—Due to a rise in the Chicago market, the "Iron Age" composite price of heavy melting steel scrap has risen to $6.38 a ton as compared with the recent low of $6.42. GAINS IN PREFERRED STOCKS SHARP

By B. C. FORBES

"IF PIGS CAN advance 60 per cent, maybe other things will," was observed here the other day. This column today shows that not a few preferred stocks have advanced as much in recent weeks.

Bears Miss Opportunity

In less than three weeks the average quotation for 50 representative stocks on the New York Exchange has risen no less than 25 per cent.

This shows that those who have been preaching and practicing nothing but bearishness have forfeited opportunities to realize very large and very quick profits. Regardless of nearby fluctuations, it has been manifest that many stocks had fallen to abnormally low levels and that sharp recoveries were certain sooner or later.

Foreign Investors Busy

Who have been the principal buyers of stocks since they fell to their lowest depths?

Europeans and small American investors. Also there has been quiet accumulation of high grade issues, including preferreds, during July by a number of wealthy individuals who recently reached the conclusion that favorable developments had begun to outweigh the unfavorable developments.

Substantial Recovery in Bonds

Bonds have likewise enjoyed substantial recovery. Here, too, European investors and Institutions have been unostentatiously active. So have a cogsiderable number of influential American investors. The purchasing power of the Morgan-sponsored bond buying corporation have been of only moderate extent—its buying power has not been one-third exhausted.

Look at the rebound already registered by a wide variety of preferred stocks:

SPECTATOR Says:

Action of the steel board confirms the belief that there is a big drive on to put prices up. In view of this, selling short seems a risky operation at this time. Looks as though commodities were being taken in hand to provide more ammunition. Bonds have been doing this for some time.

Taylor Cheerful

Myron C. Taylor, the U. S. Steel boss," appeared quite cheerful when he spoke to newspaper men after the meeting.

There seemed to be something about him which suggested that perhaps he and his associates were beginning to see some light, even though his words didn't indicate it. Payment of the regular $7 preferred was big news at 71 Broadway the elevator ma , shouting it down when he reached the ground floor.

Bulls who are willing to overlook activities may get some comfort out of the Steel Corporation statement showing net loss, not including the preferred dividend, of $20,452,000 for the June quarter this year, which compared with a $13,818,000 loss in the first three months. But those who look mainly to figures will get little comfort out of the showing. Net sales of the subsidiaries during the past 12 months to meet the operating loss suffered and the dividend distributions made.

Here and There

Even so enormous an enterprise as U. S. Steel cannot long sustain a drain, unless its directors are willing to risk serious impairment of working capital—and there certainly is no basis for believing the steel directorate would be willing to go so far.

One of the old London brokers one honors sent out a bulletin to his clients on Consumers' power and Associates securities. It closed with the curious comment that "America is turning the corner and doesn't know it" . . . On the other hand, a big and successful Paris bear crowd was selling stocks again . . . The word is around not to be short of chemical stocks.

Cincinnati, July 27—President Arthur R. Morgan of United States Printing & Lithograph Co. states the company's business has improved the past two or three weeks and as a result most of the company's plants have increased production and rehired some former employes.

GRAIN ACTION BRINGS MANY PROTESTS

By FRANK H. MELOON

Washington Cabinet order to suspend the Chicago Board of Trade has drawn a nationwide crop of protests. J. P. Maher, former financial editor of the New York American, tells us the nervousness caused has been offset in good part by belief that the courts would prevent such action. It was most important, however, as an indication of the kind of shocks that are threatened when the presidential campaign gets underway. Washington has been anxious for higher grain prices, but the tax burden together with the governmental supervision has kept leading wheat traders from the hedging side. As Philadelphia, made as the suspension order, to club traders into submission simply undermine the entire business structure.

While the cleaners were still ringing for prospective benefits to come from the Interstate Commerce

Commission's O K. of the four-system railroad merger, we ventured the suggestion that it would be the reverse of beneficial for employment. Supporting this view, President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio asks Vermonter, as we pointed out here that the week-[illegible] index no longer presented a true or complete picture of merchandise movement in this country. Standard Statistics in a current study arrives at the same conclusion. It says that, while the index presents a rather doleful picture for the railroad industry, the complete picture would afford more cheer The railroad picture alone would show us back to the level of 1880, but, with automotive loadings also to be considered, it is obvious we have by no means reached such a low point

New England Council's latest piles that outstanding organizations units to curb town and city extravagance is definitely going the rounds of advice in the column given back in 1929, and embodied in the course of an address we made at a conference of Massachusetts bankers at the Boston Chamber of Commerce Building

* * *

Traffic survey just published finds the use of automobiles greater than in the five years ago, but says nothing about the current decline, one of the main reasons for which is the excessive taxation of the automobiliat. Taxes are piled on taxes in a seeming topless pyramid to the owner. This injures not only him but also the automotive industry, which some economists thought might lead us back to prosperity, as indeed it might, given a fair chance.

* * *

Top the list of taxes under various guises which the automobilist is compelled to assume, then add the burden he must bear in his further role of home-owner, etc. No wonder he staggers. Note as just one example that an automobilist in Massachusetts—fortunately only in this Commonwealth—is forced to carry $5000 "personal injury" insurance Dynamite users get away with a bond of only $1000. And sometimes a blast, as noted recently does around $50,000 worth of alleged damage, something no auto mobile we ever heard of has done.

—STATE ST.—

Hears:

That the market acted as though sponsors of the rise decided to see what potential sellers would do. Surprisingly enough the sellers failed to take advantage of this opportunity. Consequently, a few leader issues drifted to recognized resistance, but few of these important points gave way. The district is prone to accept this as indicating that further upside demonstrations are in prospect.

Bonds Impressive

Faced with profit taking in the rail and industrial sections, could not be surprising if bond prices faltered for a day or so. So far, however, record taking has created little more than a ragged appearance in a market that is distinctly saying it means to go higher

The Dow Jones average of 40 bonds has soon recovered more than 47 per cent of its loss from March 10. Thus means that fears of banking and international insolvencies are lessened, and prevented bankruptcies result in diminished hoarding and returning confidence in the dollar's stability.

* * *

It is just possible that we are now witnessing a change in psychology which will culminate in a desire to commit good investments rather than securities whose absolute liquidity is unquestioned. A revived capital market means funds for industrial needs that cannot help but further employment.

Ticker Talk

Similarity of statements issued by U. S. Steel directors before the last common dividend and yesterday's preferred payment are causing some concern. If, as the Steel board hints, a further preferred dividend depends on business conditions, the outlook is none too hopeful

It is pretty well acknowledged throughout the "Street" that the big Steel directors before the same steel company will be hard pressed to earn anything during the early stages of revival. This is due to the increased labor costs which the wise steel makers, which resulted in productive facilities in excess of normal needs.

* * *

The best thing in the world for steel companies would be some plan to scale down their fixed charges. It is not in sight and it looks as though the market, aided by directors' conservatism, would be cheered on. More prominent preferred investments apparently are available.

Odds and Ends

While no one can take anything from the oil shares for their brilliant performance, the bonds of the same group have been quiet on the upside . . . These issues, consistently recommended here around the lows are still cheap and might be accumulated on setbacks.

* * *

Some interests say there is nothing to fear from Ottawa . . . Perhaps, but our tariffs certainly pinched us, and such foreign countries and retaliation did not help us . . . In fact, it costs American industrialists big money to establish foreign plants now shut down.

* * *

More, and higher, tariff walls could hardly be considered healthy under such conditions . . . Lorillard has been rather backward in the forward surge and State St. is beginning to wonder if its Boston sponsor has forgotten it . . . The chances are he has not. H. E. B.

Lead Price Advanced

New York, July 27 (AP)—American Smelting & Refining Co. today announced the price of lead 15 points to 2.80 cents a pound.

IRREGULARITY IS DISPLAYED IN WALL ST.

New York, July 27—Important shares were churned about uncertainly in today's trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Firmness in the first half hour was succeeded by a mid-morning slump, followed by substantial recoveries.

U. S. Steel preferred fell off 4 points before rallying, its fluctuations reflecting the varying reception of after-the-market declaration of the regular preferred dividend yesterday and the poor earnings statement that accompanied it.

BONDS AT NEW TOPS

U. S. Government bonds pushed ahead to new highs. A half dozen of the 11 active listed issues at the best prices of the year, and the other five each within 10-32 of the year's best. Not only the low-coupon issues eligible as backing for currency under the Glass-Borah bill, but also the Treasury 3½s, 4s and 4¼s reached new peaks. Profit-taking ruled in other sections of the list.

Announcement was made today that electric power output last week showed 12.5 per cent from the same week in 1931, totalling 1,433,993,000 kilowatt hours compared with 1,580,540,000 a year ago. Production was slightly above that of the preceding week, which registered a decrease of 13.9 per cent compared with the 1931 week.

Regional decreases, as reported by the National Electric Light Association, were: Atlantic seaboard, 9.8 per cent; central industrial region, 15 per cent; Pacific coast, 18.9 per cent; New England, 11.7 per cent.

VIEWS ABOUT STEEL

Some regarded maintenance of the $1.75 preferred dividend, increasing the deficit to surplus for the quarter to the record-breaking figure of $26,757,092, as indicating faith in the future.

Others interpreted the warning that future payments must be determined by improved business as foreshadowing omission at the next meeting, in view of continued low rate of operations, and lack of expectation of substantial improvement in the near term.

June railway reports continued to attract attention. New York Central, despite slashing of expenses, had net from operations of only $192,215, as reduced from $3,781,806 in the preceding year. This indicated another large deficit after fixed charges.

Pennsylvania, however, reported June net from operations of $3,179,976, as reduced from $4,639,531 in that month of last year. The initial conference on the I. C. C. approval of the four-party consolidation plan by the rankline chiefs brought no signs of developments in the near future.

North American Co. and subsidiaries had net income of $21,317,365 for the 12 months ended June 30, equal to $2.73 a share on the common stock outstanding on that date. This compared with $26,136,000, or $3.75 a share in the previous year.

Don't have to worry 'bout their looks.

"If we are to have law observance," says Police Commissioner Mulrooney, "we must look to the boys and girls of today."

But if we want to see law observance we'd better look to the babes in arms.

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Mme. Bella—Didn't you go by the name of "Little Egypt" during the Chicago Exposition? Curious.

Ans.—I am old enough to recognize the type that tries to kid every good looking woman who runs a Q. and A. department. Perhaps you are thinking of my grandmother.

FIRST INTERVIEW WITH "FORGOTTEN MAN!"

Today we take considerable pleasure and pride in printing the first interview with the "Forgotten Man" you've been hearing so much about. His views on current political issues are important and interesting, as his vote is expected to decide a lot of things in November.

Q.—So you're the Forgotten Man. Well, well, well. What do you think of the capacity of existing political leadership in an economic crisis?

A.—Yes and no.

Q.—What personalities in public life interest you most?

A.—Amos 'n' Andy.

Q.—Do you believe in group discipline or would you relax paternalism as symbolized by the Eighteenth Amendment.

NAMES PRINTED TOMORROW OF PRIZEWINNERS

Because of the many entrants received in the first half of the vaudeville identification tests names of the winners of last week's prizes will not be announced until tomorrow.

The test editor has received hundreds of entries, and many of them have guessed the names of the entire vaudeville stars' pictures printed last week.

Watch tomorrow's Boston Evening American for names of the winners as well as names of the various stars printed last week.

Only four more days are left for this week's test; three pictures of famous RKO vaudeville stars have been printed each day since last Monday in the Boston Evening American. Three more will be printed daily the rest of the week. With the pictures of these stars are hints as to their identities.

Fill in the names of these stars correctly and neatly and mail them all together to the vaudeville editor, Boston Evening American, 8 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Your entries must be postmarked not later than next Monday midnight. All readers of the Boston Evening American except employes of the paper and RKO theaters are eligible to enter.

For prizes, the winner this week will receive $25 in cash, second prize $15, third prize $10. The next 25 winners will each receive a ticket to RKO Keith's Theater, where seven acts of standard Keith vaudeville are being shown. The test is simple, and there is lots of fun guessing the names of RKO vaudeville stars, and a chance to win cash prizes while doing it!

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Snapshots at Random!

Thursday afternoon . . . On Sixth ave., near 50th st. . . . A beautiful, shapely dame with distinctive features passes by, and it isn't until she's about three blocks away that we recall she wanted to talk to her. . . . Viola Dobos . . . The youthful Hungarian beauty, who was imported for Lew Leslie's "International Revue" . . . Later, she was a star performer at the Argonaut, and at one time there were no less than three producers angling for her services . . . Within a week or two, she and her father are to be deported . . . They're destitute and, although he is a graduate engineer, there's no work for him—and there's none for her . . . Until the fall—but by that time she will have been deported, with practically no chance of her returning here for perhaps years . . . Unless she can raise funds to pay her own passage back and then return as a performer . . . It's all very complicated, and I'm not even sure I have it entirely straight, but I know I feel sorry for the young lass, whose art has inspired my written admiration in this column many times . . . Saturday night at the Pavilion Royal . . . Genuinely entertained by the multitudinous and fantastic variations of dancing on the floor . . . There's an abandon about the present season type of dancing that's far from graceful, but the lightness of jarring your body and snapping your head right and left—delicious when the orchestra's right . . . Men try it, but I like the fire and pep of it, for it convinces you, hard times or no hard times, that you're still capable of getting a great kick out of life . . . At one floorside table, the ground-faced sports-promoter, Jack Curley, chatting to a tall square-jawed lad in tortoise shell glasses—James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champ . . . Over where the Lombardos are grouped, we spot the lanky figure of Ted Husing, the announcer. "Migawd," we groan. "Husing here again? Another night spoiled" . . . From the table next to ours, a sweet-faced girl stares over at us . . . We get that sinking feeling . . . It is Mrs. Ted Husing.

At our New York office Sunday afternoon . . . The telephone rings . . . "Los Angeles calling" . . . and then a man's voice: "This is Wolfie Gilbert" . . . (the song writer) . . . "Can you hear me? This is miaou and I—oh became grandparents today at 44. My daughter had a seven and three-quarter-pound boy. Tell New York about it, will you?" . . . At the premiere of the Martin Johnson—African jungle flicker, "Congorilla," at the Winter Garden Thursday night . . . The most absorbingly interesting film that's thrilled these blase Broadway eyes for several seasons . . . I wouldn't trade that natural comedy bit of the two pygmies smoking their first cigar for all the humor situations concocted by high-priced Hollywood pageants . . . A series of mellow chuckles cares my eardrums . . . I turn to look . . . They come from Sir Hubert Wilkins, a gentlemen who's had his share of adventures, too . . . Dr. Nat Lief, the dentist-lyricist, sighs as he studies the huge yawn of the hippopotamus . . . "Boy, some there's a molar I'd like to yank," he mutters . . . Later, over to the Mayfair for the private inspection of "What Price Hollywood" . . . To find another treat in store for us in the Thursday night projection of Lowell Sherman and Constance Bennett . . . Coming out, we bump into Peter B. Kyne . . . "Just what Sherman," he observes, "is a drunk before my own heart. Neat—without being gaudy." . . . Saturday night at the Casais out on the Merrick road . . . Agnes Franey, the blonde Ziegfeld beauty, dancing with a handsome, youthful looking chap . . . Her daddy . . . One couple attracts attention—particularly from the gals . . . A stoutish but pleasant faced matron dancing with a tall, curly-haired, good looking chap of about 18 or 19—but not—with the boy apparently having the time of his life . . . In contrast to the sensuous expressions on the faces of some of the men as they hold their women close to them and whirl around the floor without benefit of clergy . . .

At the Napoleon Club Monday night . . . A young couple absorbed in each other . . . The Social Register Grayson—Kaufman and his wife, Mae Daw, former Ziegfeld beauty . . . They whisper to each other and laugh, then look around and one wonders about those rumors, some of which have crept into print, that they have been at odds with each other . . . Over in a corner, pretty Sally O'Neil, vivacious as ever, chattering as usual, recites the experience of her recent visit to Father Joseph Connors' boys in Jersey . . . A talented girl who has written a number of outstanding popular songs . . .

At Lindy's about 1:30 Saturday afternoon . . . Earl Carroll sitting alone at a secluded table reading the newspaper account of Ziegfeld's death . . . We wonder what passes through the mind, for he and Ziegfeld hadn't been on speaking terms . . . He shakes his head, as he reads . . . At another table, Irving Berlin—and he, too, his pale face, more sombre than ever, reads the story of the showman's passing . . . Friend and foe alike, the death of Ziegfeld comes as a shock and all agree that it will be many years before Broadway will have as glamorous a showman . . . Snapshots . . . The Album of Manhattan.

The Highway Slaughter

Monument to Selfish Impetuosity

You have seen a regiment of soldiers on parade.

Imagine, if you can, that before the year's end that regiment is to be decimated.

Every last man, from the Colonel to the bugler, is to be destroyed.

In these days of peace, when no war banners are unfurled, when the Nation is in concord with the world and no enemies are bombarding its cities or assaulting its population, a regiment of people is being slaughtered in automobile accidents.

If the death rate of last week is maintained, 1248 people will have been destroyed in this "peaceful" year of 1932.

This gray regiment of death includes not only the strong, sturdy, resourceful men who can inflict some casualties of their own while defending their country from the assaults of the invading enemy.

They include defenseless women and children, who possess neither the strength nor skill to defend themselves.

They are struck down while they are engaged in the normal pursuits of peace, menacing no one, abridging the rights of no one.

They are slain by their neighbors and compatriots, with whom they are supposed to be living in peace and harmony.

At the rate we are going, in this time of peace and goodwill at least in this country, more than 40,000 men, women and children, the equivalent of two entire army divisions, will have been extinguished on the highways of the United States.

There is no rhyme, reason or satisfactory excuse for this woeful slaughter, for this dizzy speed mill which seems to place no recognition upon the value of human life.

It must be accounted as a mad whirl of recklessness and carelessness, because every sacrificed life could be spared by considerate, prudent operation of the motor cars.

We are building a fine monument indeed to our selfish impetuosity.

The historian can write a significant epitaph on it to us. "They built the roads; and erected slaughterhouses thereon."

Think this over. Let us mend our ways. Human life was given us to conserve and protect, not to be cut down like cockle before the scythe of selfishness and recklessness.

Baseball to Aid Newsboys

Buy Saturday's Game Tickets in Advance

A baseball game will be played at Braves Field on Saturday between the Boston Braves and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Naturally, a large audience will attend, because of the half-holiday and because the contesting teams include on the one hand the World's Champions and, on the other, our local team which is fighting for supremacy this year with some prospect of success.

Judge Emil Fuchs has decided to donate some of the proceeds of this game to the Burroughs Newsboys' Foundation. It is altogether too much to expect that fine sportsmen like Judge Fuchs and Paul Bowser and the others who have been so generous in the period of distress should donate their entire income, to the last penny, to charity. So in this case, Judge Fuchs has offered to the newsboys the proceeds from the advance sale of tickets for the game.

The Burroughs Newsboys' Foundation is worthy of your help. It has an impressive name. In fact, it is the newsboys of Boston, those hustling, industrious lads who deliver your newspaper to your home or sell it to you on the streets. They maintain a home, where the boys may have clean recreation, sports and pastimes. They send some of their number to college. They are generous to those of their own and their families in need.

If you are going to the game anyway, buy your ticket a day or two in advance. You will be spending only the amount you would spend at the park entrances on the day of the game. And through the generosity of Judge Fuchs and yourselves, you will be aiding a very worthy cause.

"Big Drive of State Drys"

The dry forces in Massachusetts—such as are left of them—find no cause for satisfaction in either the Democratic or Republican platforms on prohibition.

Accordingly they have turned thumbs down, for the present at least, on both candidates for President and have decided to consolidate their support upon dry candidates for Congress in this State.

They will not have far to go. Of the three dry Congressmen, Mr. Dallinger has been safely tucked into a judicial post and Mr. Underhill has decided not to tempt the chagrin of his constituents, leaving Mr. Luce of Waltham as the sole dry to whom they can throw their enfeebled support.

The announcement of their "big drive to elect all Bay State drys" comes singularly at a time inauspicious to them. Texas has gone wet and the dry clergyman, Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher, Jr., returns from a tour of the country to announce his surprise at the number of persons he found who once believed in prohibition but now favor its repeal.

Mr. Brougher should not have been surprised. Any man with two good eyes and two good ears should have known that the overwhelming sentiment of the country is to be done with the vicious evils of prohibition. Mr. Luce, an astute politician, may not be surprised at what his outraged constituents will do to him on election day. But he will be pained, at least.

LISTEN, WORLD!—On Magazine Page Today

The Beacon of Hope!

In the darkness of his distress, as he struggles with his onerous tax burdens on the Sea of Debt, the harassed American taxpayer sees in a general manufacturers' FIVE PER CENT SALES TAX his BEACON OF HOPE, the light to guide him to Succor and Relief.

Demagogues in Congress snuffed this light on him at the last session, meanwhile piling high the load on his shoulders AND HIS THINNED POCKETBOOK.

Canada has long demonstrated the success of the general Sales Tax, Mississippi is demonstrating the success of a Consumers' Sales Tax or a Shop Tax. Our own Philippines know its values.

Business men, realty owners, citizens generally throughout the land have come to realize the UNWISE action of Congress in failing to make the Manufacturers' Sales Tax an integral part of our tax system. THE DECEMBER SESSION SHOULD ENACT IT.

The Thrilling Adventure of Old Mother Hubbard

When old Mother Hubbard had gone to the cupboard and found there was nothing doing in the bone line she started out to get help.

Old Mother Hubbard went to the Allies,
And was shocked, astounded and stunned.
When she asked for some dough they all hollered "No.
We borrow but never refund."

O. O. McIntyre -:- New York Day by Day

Pavement Characters

NEW YORK, July 27—Like London's famous street cries, New York pavement characters offer a prickling panorama. No mid-town figure is gayer than Blind George, the newsman, holding forth on a Bryant Park corner. On a lower reach of Lafayette, Silk Hat Tony adds his touch of the ridiculous.

In high silk hat and frock coat, he furnishes shines to his customers. Somebody gave him the regalia and dared him to wear it on duty. He did, and had his biggest day. That was three years ago, and Tony prospered amazingly. And there is the top-hatted fellow with the electrically lighted shirt front.

Also, Skyscraper Ike, who weaves perilously through street traffic on 20-foot-high stilts, placarded with a quick lunch menu. Brooklyn Ada has worked the same block in West 46th for innumerable years, always in need of "only a nickel to get to Brooklyn." Apple Mary, who stands near the entrance of 25 Broadway.

Dusk brings its pair of blind musicians in single file, who parade Broadway, rendering lively tunes. On a stretch of upper Riverside is Cohan, the leather-tanned photographer, who has stood on the roadside with his tripod for 10 years. Battery Dan of the barge office.

In 57th street is the sombrero'ed Indian, hawking green snakes of wood. And, of course, the flood of street urchins with single copies of magazines, soliciting automobilists. "Buy this, Mister, so I can go home!" A flivver supply-depot keeps them in constant supply.

A subtlety of ragamuffins these days is a sleeping racket. Theatergoers return to cars, parked in side streets, to find tatterdemalions feigning slumber on the running board. Awakened, they begin a sniffle off in a niggling frustratica. The artifice always inspires a jingle of coins.

Edgar Saltus zoomed all to briefly across literary skies. With his great gifts, he wrote comparatively little. Yet he has a staunch and select coterie of worshippers as fervid as the followers of Conrad or Wells. Many rate him an epigrammatist on par with Whistler and Wilde. I thought of him today, after a flash at a headlined "love at first sight" society romance quickly breached in a tabloid headline. Saltus once wrote: "Love at first sight ends in divorce at first slight."

* * *

Walter O'Keefe's sudden upshoot in the American uproar as an epigrammatist, incidentally, is no surprise to those who gathered about his table in a faraway corner of Barney Gallant's, in The Village, where he got his toe-hold as a clever master of ceremony. He has come into full flex nationally, of late, over the radio, but for a half-dozen years he has been spinning wisecracks with innocent benediction. From Barney's he was graduated into sophisticated revues, interpolating his pure streaks of absurdity with an occasional stinging lyric. Perhaps his most widely quoted mot was his description of Hollywood. He pictured it as: "Bridgeport—with palms."

Little Frankie of the Algonquin will be missed. For 25 years he was the night elevator man. I came to know Frankie when my mother-in-law resided there. His mood was amiable always, and I was beholden to him for a trifle more confidence in human nature. With shy pathos, he sweetened the world by such little acts of grace as keeping crackers hidden for dogs—all leaping to him with affection. He knew the great intimately, but never shed the humility of his role. John Drew addressed him in mock obeisance as Francesca, and he was on intimate footing with Henry L. Mencken, Joe Hergesheimer, Elsie Janis, Jim Tully, Ina Claire and Bert Lytell. He kept a watchful eye on Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and Juster Collier in pinafore days. It is somehow a desolating thought, none of us will see Frankie in this world. Frank Case expressed it perfectly in a privately circulated panegyric. He wrote: "Frankie has made his last trip up. He will not be down again."

I often wonder if some of the most pleasant human contacts are not with night elevator men. Life seasons but never hardens them. Who, having met, could forget the white-haired veteran of the London Savoy's life? Or Old Wash at the Hargrave 20 years ago? Or the asthma-stricken optimist of the Ritz? Or the scholarly-looking courtier at 290 Park?

Just What Does Borah Mean?

By Claude G. Bowers

THERE IS NOTHING in Senator Borah's speech which necessarily means a reversal of his position on the debts. He commends the Lausanne conference for its action on reparations—as does every one else, we think. The Allies, in possession of the merchant fleet, the colonies, the trade of Germany, have collected as much as a victor should exact from the vanquished. The enormity of the reparations exacted staggered credulity at the time they were fixed in an atmosphere of insanity. Germany has paid as much as she can pay—and it has been enough.

Borah thinks it was a fine thing for the Allies to face the facts and slash reparations to a comparatively low figure. And says so. But this has been his position all along.

Would Let U. S. Pay if Europe Disarms

As to the debts owing the people of the United States, he has, from the beginning, said that he would be willing to have these debts paid by the people of the United States if the debtor nations would cut their expenditures for war purposes to the bone. And this, apparently, is his position now.

He does imply that prosperity will be passed around to every one if the taxpayers of this country pay these debts of other nations that are in a less desperate plight economically than we—if something more is done by the debtor nations than has been done in the Lausanne conference.

Thus he says quite clearly:

"I am clear that the cancellation of these debts, with nothing more than the present reparations adjustment, would not have the effect"—of restoring prosperity.

In other words, he thinks that something worth while has been done if the Allies are prepared to take the German people off the cross as far as reparations are concerned; but nothing has been done to interest us so long as the debtor nations are spending billions in preparations for another war.

And, of course, nothing has been done to end that criminal imposition on a world sinking into the grave under the weight of taxes.

If the debtor nations cut their budgets on armament, and if it can be shown that the transfer of the debts to the taxpayers of this country "will start wheat and cotton to moving" and restore prosperity to us, Borah is prepared to consider "cancellation."

Senator Borah thinks there should be an immediate conference called on debts and everything economic and financial. He puts it thus:

"Such a conference ought to be authorized to deal with any economic and financial question which would have any legitimate bearing on the economic recovery of the world. We should not hesitate as a government to take our place in such a conference and be willing to deal with all economic and financial problems which are associated with the present condition of affairs."

Does he mean that he favors such a conference before the debtor nations have made the drastic cuts in their budgets for war purposes? They have made no such cuts yet. Nor is there any reason to believe they will.

Second, disarmament.

But Borah Forgets Barriers of Tariffs

It will be observed that the trade barriers called tariffs that have ruined international trade—barriers that we put up first and invited the retaliation of other nations—are not to be considered.

Yet, nothing has done more to ruin the world.

Perhaps we need go no further than the desperation of the situation for an explanation for Borah's wholly unexpected speech. He says:

"The stakes are tremendous. Delay is hazardous. Sixty days of depression in the latter days of 1932 will be more devastating than six months in the latter part of 1930. If the upward trend does not start before the cold winds of December, conditions will be nothing less than appalling."

That is the reason Congress should not have adjourned, leaving millions of the jobless with their women and children open to the cold winds of December. These have been ignored. And they will increase in number. Will the transfer of the debts of other nations to us, without reductions in the appalling armament budgets, without anything done on the tariff for the restoration of foreign trade, with nothing done for the stabilization of silver in the Orient, put these men to work before the cold winds of December?

Just Folks

Country Picture

Last year upon a little porch
As I went riding by,
A quaint old pair, with silvered hair,
I often used to spy

The little yard was gay
With hollyhocks and scarlet phlox.
As picturesque were they
And oft the thought occurred to me
How very lonely they must be.

Now summer time is here once more.
Again the road I fare,
But where they sat I notice that
The man alone is there.
And well I know one winter day
God must have called the wife away.

Now never shall I pass that house
When the cool breezes stir
The summer flowers in evening hours,
But I shall think of her
So stately and so dignified,
Who looked so lovely at his side.
